Naval Bases Exchanged for 50 "Obsolete" War-ships

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP)—To an accompanying chorus of Congressional approval and protest, President Roosevelt disclosed today that he was turning over fifty "over-age" American destroyers to Great Britain to bulwark that beleaguered country against the onslaught of Nazi Germany.

The United States is to receive, in turn, the right to construct a string of outlying naval and air bases extending from Newfoundland to South America. Their chief value, the President declared, would be in keeping an overseas enemy away from America's front door.

The state department announced that it had received also a British pledge that in no event would the British fleet be sunk or surrendered to Germany. If driven out of European waters, it was said, the English ships of war would be sent abroad for the "defense of other parts of the empire."

No Action by Congress

The whole transaction, which attorney general Jackson ruled did not require Congressional action, was described by President Roosevelt, in a brief message notifying Congress of what was being done, as "an epochal and far-reaching Congress of what was being done, as "an epochal and far-reaching act of preparation for continental defense in the face of grave danger."

"This is the most important action in the reinforcement of our national defense that has been taken since the Louisiana purchase," Mr. Roosevelt added.

The Congressional bloc which was supported the president's policy of helping England went on record swiftly and enthusiastically as approving the exchange.

But with the group that has urged strict alooftness from the European conflict, it was a different matter. Its members denounced the transaction as an "act of war," which, some said, would justify Adolf Hitler in declaring war on the United States.

Members of this group contended that Congress should have been given the opportunity to pass upon the transaction. They called it an act of a "dictator," and asserted that the transfer of the destroyers was forbidden by law.

Gives Jacksons Opinion

On the latter point, Mr. Roosevelt attached to his congressional message the opinion by Attorney General Jackson holding that no legal obstacle existed. Jackson's argument holding that no legal obstacle existed. Jackson's argument dealt among other things with the 1917 law providing that:

"During a war in which the United States is a neutral nation, it shall be unlawful to send out of the jurisdiction of the United States any vessel, built, armed, or equipped as a vessel, of war, or converted from a private vessel into a

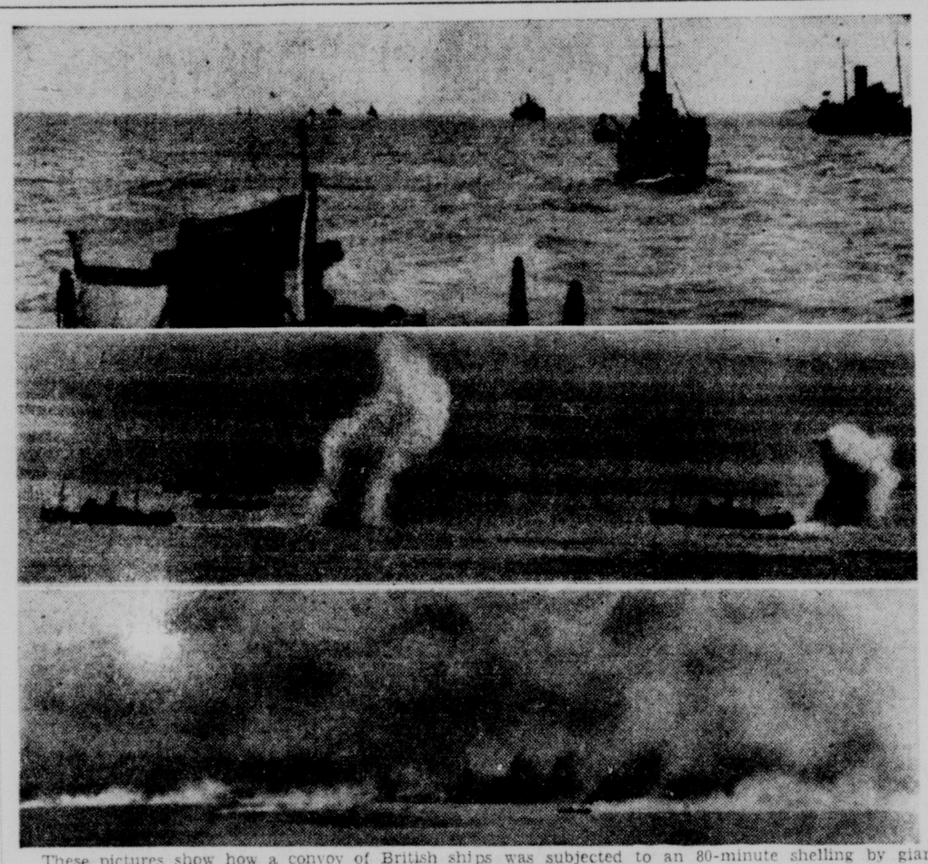
BRITISH CONVOY SHELLED BY GIANT NAZI GUNS



These pictures show how a convoy of British ships was subjected to an 80-minute shelling by giant Nazi guns set up on the French coast. Top, stretching to the far horizon, the convoy makes its peaceful way through the Straits of Dover. Center, the cannon open fire and shells fall perilously close to their target. Lower, convoying warships lay down a smoke screen to conceal the merchantmen. Britain reports none of the ships was hit.

British Rejoice Over Deal with U. S. for Ships

Feel That Destroyers Will Fill Gaps in the Royal Navy

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The British rejoiced tonight wherever they gathered, from Cheapside pubs to the austere and misty corridors of the foreign office, over the news that fifty over-age U. S. destroyers will fill the gaps of the Royal navy in the total German siege of these islands.

First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander in a statement greeted "with the utmost pleasure and satisfaction" the transfer of destroyers. He added: "They come at a time when the strain upon our destroyer fleet has been very great and will be of inestimable value to us not only for escorting convoys but also for protecting our coasts from the threat of invasion."

Officials Pleased

Moreover, he added, "this event will strengthen the feeling of goodwill and friendship between our to great peoples."

The official reaction from a foreign office spokesman was that "successful conclusion of this agreement (for delivery to Britain of the destroyers; for lease to the United States of north and south Atlantic air and naval bases) is greeted with the greatest posible satisfaction by his majesty's government and the peoples of the British empire and commonwealth of nations."

The traditionally careful spokesman could not restrain his personal enthusiasm. He greeted reporters

German Raiders Driven Off in London Attack

Great Waves of Bombers Unable To Reach British Capital

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 4 (Wednesday)—German raiding planes in great waves beat in vain yesterday at a curtain of defensive fire thrown up about London and were driven off a third time late last night after a fourteen minute engagement at the city's outskirts.

Other night bombers, however, attacked the industrial midlands; northwest, northeast, southeast and southwest England and areas in Wales and Scotland. Bombs fell in at least one southeast town. At least thirteen cities reported raiders overhead.

The day's third raid on London came at 11:35 p. m. (5:35 p. m., eastern standard time). It was the shortest on record for the London area.

Almost at the same time that London reported "all clear," the German wireless announced that an air raid alarm had been sounded in Berlin, thus indicating that the British were reciprocating.

The RAF continued at night its raids on the French coast. Observers in England saw anti-aircraft shells and bombs bursting in the Calais region.

British Minimize Raids

The Nazis' daylight attacks on southeast England had brought one of the war's biggest air battles, but the air ministry said the Germans managed to bomb only one spot in Kent, and the majority were turned back at the coast.

Helping in the defense of Britain, a newly-formed Czech squadron was officially saluted and credited with destroying several German planes during the day.

The British said twenty-five attacking planes were destroyed during the day at a British loss of fifteen planes. Eight RAF pilots, however, were said to be safe.

As for the offensive, at the start of the second year of war, the air ministry told of successful raids by the Royal Air Force "night hawk patrol" on objectives all the way from German-conquered Norway to Italy.

Bomb Power Plant

Especially heavy blows were rained upon a power plant at Genoa, a dynamite works near Cologne, and gun emplacements on the French coast, the ministry declared. Nazi supply ships in a Norwegian harbor on Sogne fjord and off the Dutch coast also were bombed.

Prince Frederick Held in Canada

Grandson of Former Kaiser Prisoner in Internment Camp

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP) — The New York Daily News says that Prince Frederick of Prussia, 28, grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm and a favorite of British society until the outbreak of the war, has been imprisoned in a concentration camp in Canada for a month.

"Word that the youngest son of Germany's one-time Crown Prince Willy had been taken across the Atlantic after his arrest as an enemy alien in July came to New York yesterday in a letter from another German prisoner," The Daily News said.

Handsome and personable, the prince was widely popular in Mayfair society. His name was once linked with that of Countess Barbara Haugwitz-Reventlow, but he denied there was any romance between them.

Announcement of his internment was made in London last month.

Italian Raiders Damage Four of Britain's Fleet

Hit Battleship, Aircraft Carrier, Cruiser and Destroyer

ROME, Sept. 3 (AP)—Italian fliers attacking British naval units with small, "pixilated" dive-bombers were reported today to have damaged a battleship, an aircraft carrier, a cruiser and a destroyer in two running fights near Malta in the central Mediterranean.

Squadrons of "Picchiatelli"—little divers or "flying fools" developed expressly to harass British shipping—also downed four challenging British planes which took off from the aircraft carrier, the high command announced. Three Italian planes were lost.

Romans said the word "Picchiatelli" first entered the Italian language as a translation for "pixilated," as used in an American movie, "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," to designate a person slightly crazy.

The first British naval unit was sighted leaving Valletta harbor, Malta, early yesterday and the second group was engaged in the afternoon about thirty miles southeast of the island.

Stefani, the official news agency, said one battleship, struck by two heavy caliber bombs, turned away and abandoned formation while other bombs badly damaged the aircraft carrier.

Italian pilots meanwhile reported large scale British naval operations throughout the Mediterranean area from Gibraltar in the west to Cyprus in the east.

Three British bombers were reported downed and two others were believed to have crashed in a continuation of raids on northern Italy. The daily communique said two persons were killed and fifteen injured at Genoa.

War in Indo-China Threatened by Japs

By The Associated Press

HONGKONG, Sept. 3 (AP) — A reported virtual ultimatum from Japan to the governor of Indo-China heightened tonight the possibility that rich torrid possession of defeated France would become a battlefield—even if its poorly-armed forces do not resist.

Neutral informants from Hanoi, Indo-China capital, said the Japanese insisted on immediate use of Haiphong, main port on the Gulf of Tonkin, as a military base — and the right, as well, to move Japanese troops over the French-owned Yunnan railroad to the Chinese border.

China's foreign minister, Wang Chung-Hui, already has declared that Chinese forces will invade Indo-China if the Japanese send troops there."

Although Reuters (British) dispatches from Saigon, French Indo-China, said the Japanese army ultimatum had been rejected, Hanoi informants asserted the Petain-appointed governor-general, Vice-Admiral Jean Decoux, had decided to try to delay a decision and seek further instructions from Vichy.

Roosevelt Visits Ordnance Plant In Charleston

President Sees Hot Ingots Turned into Armor Plate

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

ABOARD, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S TRAIN to WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP)—President Roosevelt saw a naval ordnance plant at South Charleston, W. Va., turning red-hot steel ingots into armor today and then indicated he would be off soon on perhaps half a dozen more trips to projects vital to national defense.

He saw what was described as the world's biggest armor plate press grinding on glowing 100-ton mass of metal in the ordnance plant located strategically behind a rim of mountains.

He saw huge saws and a giant pit planer bitting into more chunks of tough steel.

Then he motored to Charleston with thousands of yelling, applauding people along the way and left for Washington by special train.

Reporters Pack Car

Reporters packed every available inch of the tiny parlor of his private car were advised at a press conference that plans were tentative and indefinite but that the chief executive wanted to continue his series of inspections of defense installations with visits to: New York city and nearby New Jersey areas; the vicinity of Pittsburgh; points along the Ohio river as far as halfway down the state of Kentucky.

He said he had promised to make the New York inspection and one in Philadelphia and Camden, N. J., and that he would certainly go over to Baltimore some afternoon.

He might make it to Wright Field at Dayton, O., he said, if the trip would not take him more than 12 hours, or an overnight train ride from Washington.

That would eliminate mid-west points as far as the Mississippi river.

Reporters reminded him that he could fly to the west coast overnight, but the chief executive remarked that the secret service would not let him.

The necessity of handling problems arising in connection with the leasing of naval and air bases from England and the transfer of fifty old destroyers to Britain, he asserted, demonstrated why he could not

Army Equipment May Be Sent to British Forces

Believed Likely To Be Shipped in Deal for Naval Bases

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP)—Wording of the United States' agreement with Great Britain aroused speculation tonight that Britain might receive army equipment, as well as naval destroyers, in exchange for naval and air base leases.

Lord Lothian's note to Secretary Hull said Britain would make bases available "in exchange for naval and military equipment and material which the United States government will transfer to his majesty's government."

Hull's reply said only that fifty destroyers would be transferred "immediately." No "military equipment" was mentioned, and the war, navy and state departments disclaimed any knowledge of additional considerations given to Britain.

In the past, the army has released large quantities of rifles, machine guns and field artillery, officially designated as surplus, to a private corporation for resale to Great Britain.

A "full load" of shells and torpedoes also will go with each of the fifty destroyers released to Britain, a navy spokesman said. Many of the ships have been serving in the neutrality patrol and are presumed to be armed and loaded. They will go to England "in operating condition," the navy added.

Fire Seven Shots as Groups Attempt Coup To Seize Government

Break Through Guard and Attack Palace, Wreck Telephone Exchange and Do Other Damage; Many Shots Fired before Alleged Iron Guardists Are Taken Prisoners

By The Associated Press

BUCHAREST, Sept. 4 (Wednesday)—Gunmen attempted in vain to assassinate King Carol last night in an alleged Iron Guardist plot to seize power and place Prince Mihai on the throne.

While the would-be assassins broke through the palace guard and fired seven shots at a lighted window in Carol's palace, other groups of Iron Guardists attacked the Bucharest radio station and the American-owned telephone company's central office.

King Carol

Other "Coups" Crushed

Similar coups were attempted at Brasov and Constanza but were quickly crushed.

One Iron Guardist and one palace guard were reported shot in the assassins' attempt to storm the palace here, but neither was wounded fatally.

Many shots were fired in the palace grounds before the attackers were overcome and hustled away by soldiers in the car in which they had arrived at the palace.

Wreck Telephone Exchange

Several men entered the telephone exchange and wrecked some of the switchboards with hatchets. Most local lines were put out of order. The radio station went off the air after a group of men in uniform burst in and tried to destroy the equipment.

All were arrested.

The fact that a coup had been attempted was acknowledged in an official communique, but the effort to kill King Carol was minimized.

The various groups made no secret that they were Iron Guardists. In the palace grounds they threw out hundreds of manifestos signed by Horia Sima, the Iron Guard fuehrer who recently resigned from the cabinet.

These leaflets called for immediate abdication of Carol and for Prince Mihai to be proclaimed king in his stead.

"The nation demands capital punishment for those to blame for Rumania's present troubles."

The situation through the country became increasingly critical. Immediately after the incidents in Bucharest soldiers were rushed to the palace with machine-guns, gas masks and full equipment. All restaurants and other public places were closed at once, and soldiers and gendarmes filled the streets.

Unconfirmed reports spread that four of the highest ranking generals of the Rumanian army were under arrest. There also were rumors that three army corps in northern Transylvania had revolted.

Dickie Lee Known To Have Bagged More than Fifty Nazis

McNulty Says Firemen Must Prepare To Battle against Incendiary Bombs

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 3 (AP)—A warning that American fire fighters must be prepared to battle a new kind of incendiary warfare was given today at the opening session of the eleventh annual firemen's short course at the University of Maryland.

John F. McNulty, Maryland State Firemen's Association president, told the approximately 150 volunteer firemen from thirteen counties and Baltimore city that in most of the countries of Europe "fire fighters are working shoulder to shoulder with the soldiers—exposing themselves to all the dangers of war" because of the incendiary bombs dropped by airplanes.

The short course, sponsored by the University of Maryland's College of Engineering and the State Firemen's Association, will end Friday.

McNulty said that never before in the world's history had society relied so much upon the efficiency of fire fighters as today.

He asserted America must prepare for "this new kind of incendiary warfare" and expressed the

Nazis Start Second Year of War With Furious Attacks on British

By The Associated Press

BERLIN Sept. 3 — The thunder of unremitting air war rolled across the English channel today as Adolf Hitler's Luftwaffe, starting a new year of the struggle with Britain, hammered at her harbors and airfields.

From early morning until night German pilots and planes charged across the narrow waters, engaging Britain's Royal Air Force in battles all along the coast, and then driving on to attack air and naval bases.

Pilots back from air raids on eight British harbors, described smoke pouring from the southeastern port of Bristol and darkening the skies to 6,500 feet. The damage at three other ports and bases, Swansea and Cardiff in Wales, and Portsmouth on the south coast, was said to be hardly less.

The high command said fires resulted from other night attacks on Liverpool, Plymouth, Portland and Poole.

In the series of heavy raids yesterday, the high command said, barracks and hangars were partly destroyed at several airfields on the road to London which the airforce is trying to blast open.

At least fifty-four British planes were destroyed before noon, reports from the raiding squadrons said, fifteen before they could rise to do battle. Twelve German planes failed to return.

Birmingham, Coventry and Filton were named as aircraft and industrial centers bombed in central England.

In these battles, the communique said, ninety-three British planes were lost, while German planes missing totaled twenty-three.

As for British raids on Germany, they did not come anywhere near Berlin, the high command declared, although bombs were dropped at several other places. The only damage mentioned was to buildings on one farm.

Modified Plan for Conscription Of Industry Backed by Committee

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3. (AP) — A modified plan to conscript industries under certain circumstances won approval of the House Military Committee today, and the House itself then began debate on the Burke-Wadsworth Conscription bill.

That measure, provided for peacetime drafting of the nation's young manhood for military training, was denounced on the House floor as a step toward "Hitlerism" and praised as the Democratic way to strengthen the army.

Chairman May (D-Ky) announced that on behalf of the House Military Committee, which sponsored the legislation, he would offer later this week an amendment permitting the government to place preferential orders for defense supplies with industry. This includes the stipulation that, if the plant owner refused to comply, the war or navy department could take over the factory, on a rental basis, for the production of such materials.

Changes Senate Bill

"Missing—Lee, flying officer, R. H. A., D. S. O., D. F. C., 33208.

His name was Dickie Lee, a blond, smiling kid of twenty-two who looked like a collar ad and flew like the devil.

Son of a World war airman, Dickie was a flight lieutenant and the hero of a hundred news stories telegraphed by American correspondents who met him at the airfield near Lille, in France, last fall. Until now they couldn't tell his name because of censorship.

When he flew out to fight the Germans and didn't come back Britain's Royal Air Force lost one of its most brilliant pilots.

In less than a year he had become something of a legend.

Bags Many Nazi Planes

The king awarded him the Distinguished Service Order and the Distinguished Flying Cross in June after he had shot down close to fifty Nazi planes.

But that was only part of the Lee story. A good-natured youth, he liked to sing "Frankie and Johnnie" and "Casey Jones," and other rollicking songs. He was twice captured, and twice escaped.

Once he got away by disguising

Army Equipment May Be Sent to British Forces

Believed Likely To Be Shipped in Deal for Naval Bases

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP)—Wording of the United States' agreement with Great Britain aroused speculation tonight that Britain might receive army equipment, as well as naval destroyers, in exchange for naval and air base leases.

Lord Lothian's note to Secretary Hull said Britain would make bases available "in exchange for naval and military equipment and material which the United States government will transfer to his majesty's government."

Hull's reply said only that fifty destroyers would be transferred "immediately." No "military equipment" was mentioned, and the war, navy and state departments disclaimed any knowledge of additional considerations given to Britain.

In the past, the army has released large quantities of rifles, machine guns and field artillery, officially designated as surplus, to a private corporation for resale to Great Britain.

A "full load" of shells and torpedoes also will go with each of the fifty destroyers released to Britain, a navy spokesman said. Many of the ships have been serving in the neutrality patrol and are presumed to be armed and loaded. They will go to England "in operating condition," the navy added.

Nazis Start Second Year of War With Furious Attacks on British

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 3 — The thunder of unremitting air war rolled across the English channel today as Adolf Hitler's Luftwaffe, starting a new year of the struggle with Britain, hammered at her harbors and airfields.

From early morning until night German pilots and planes charged across the narrow waters, engaging Britain's Royal Air Force in battles all along the coast, and then driving on to attack air and naval bases.

Pilots back from air raids on eight British harbors, described smoke pouring from the southeastern port of Bristol and darkening the skies to 6,500 feet. The damage at three other ports and bases, Swansea and Cardiff in Wales, and Portsmouth on the south coast, was said to be hardly less.

The high command said fires resulted from other night attacks on Liverpool, Plymouth, Portland and Poole.

In the series of heavy raids yesterday, the high command said, barracks and hangars were partly destroyed at several airfields on the road to London which the airforce is trying to blast open.

At least fifty-four British planes were destroyed before noon, reports from the raiding squadrons said, fifteen before they could rise to do battle. Twelve German planes failed to return.

Birmingham, Coventry and Filton were named as aircraft and industrial centers bombed in central England.

In these battles, the communique said, ninety-three British planes were lost, while German planes missing totaled twenty-three.

As for British raids on Germany, they did not come anywhere near Berlin, the high command declared, although bombs were dropped at several other places. The only damage mentioned was to buildings on one farm.

McNulty Says Firemen Must Prepare To Battle against Incendiary Bombs

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 3 (AP)—A warning that American fire fighters must be prepared to battle a new kind of incendiary warfare was given today at the opening session of the eleventh annual firemen's short course at the University of Maryland.

John F. McNulty, Maryland State Firemen's Association president, told the approximately 150 volunteer firemen from thirteen counties and Baltimore city that in most of the countries of Europe "fire fighters are working shoulder to shoulder with the soldiers—exposing themselves to all the dangers of war" because of the incendiary bombs dropped by airplanes.

The short course, sponsored by the University of Maryland's College of Engineering and the State Firemen's Association, will end Friday.

McNulty said that never before in the world's history had society relied so much upon the efficiency of fire fighters as today.

He asserted America must prepare for "this new kind of incendiary warfare" and expressed the

Modified Plan for Conscription Of Industry Backed by Committee

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP) — A modified plan to conscript industries under certain circumstances won approval of the House Military Committee today, and the House itself then began debate on the Burke-Wadsworth Conscription bill.

That measure, provided for peacetime drafting of the nation's young manhood for military training, was denounced on the House floor as a step toward "Hitlerism" and praised as the Democratic way to strengthen the army.

Chairman May (D-Ky) announced that on behalf of the House Military Committee, which sponsored the legislation, he would offer later this week an amendment permitting the government to place preferential orders for defense supplies with industry. This includes the stipulation that, if the plant owner refused to comply, the war or navy department could take over the factory, on a rental basis, for the production of such materials.

Changes Senate Bill

Believed Congress Should Have Had Chance To Discuss Action

RUSHVILLE, IND., Sept. 3, (AP) — Although declaring "the country will undoubtedly approve" of the administration's trade of destroyers for naval base rights in British possessions, Wendell L. Willkie said today it was regrettable President Roosevelt "did not deem it necessary" to obtain prior Congressional approval or permit public discussion.

Willkie handed reporters this formal statement at a press conference in his back yard:

"The country will undoubtedly approve of the program to add to our naval and air bases and assistance given to Great Britain. It is regrettable however, that the president did not deem it necessary in connection with this proposal, to secure the approval of Congress or permit public discussion prior to adoption.

"The people have a right to know of such important commitments prior to and not after made.

Must Be Careful

"We must be extremely careful in these times when the struggle in the world is between democracy and totalitarianism not to eliminate or destroy the Democratic processes while seeking to preserve democracy.

"It is the contention of the totalitarian rulers that democracy is not effective. We must prove that it is effective by making full use of its process. Congress has constitutional functions as important and sacred as those of the chief executive."

Asked whether the Anglo-American exchange arrangement constituted "an act of war," the Republican presidential nominee replied,

"That is one of the things debate and discussion would have completely clarified."

Own Views Not Stated

Willkie's statement did not specifically express his own views regarding the agreement and he declined to elaborate for publication.

Asked for comment on President Roosevelt's Tennessee address yesterday, Willkie asserted "when I make political speeches I resignate them as such."

Announcing the Republican National Committee would ask that he be given free radio time equal to that given Mr. Roosevelt, Willkie said he wanted to use it "to make my political speeches."

Told that Senator Overton (D-La.) had disclaimed administration inspiration for his Senate-approved proposal to permit the government to seize certain defense facilities, Willkie asked: "If that is true, why didn't the president say so?"

Willkie, an opponent of the Overton plan, had demanded previously that the chief executive state his position regarding the proposal.

Roosevelt Visits

get too far away from the national capital in these times.

A final decision on the agreement, he said, was made when his special train passed through Washington Sunday afternoon and Secretary Hull came aboard for a conference.

Mr. Roosevelt's arrival in Washington tonight was to mark the end of a week's absence, spent partly at his home in Hyde Park, N. Y., and partly on a speaking trip into the south.

In what appeared in retrospect to be a planned prelude to the announcement of the defense base and destroyer arrangements the president had pounded away on national defense themes in Labor Day addresses in which he dedicated the TVA'S Chickamauga dam and the Great Smoky Mountains National park.

He had spoken with exceptional vigor of the dangers he saw for America and of the needs of the nation to "prepare in a thousand ways" to meet them.

"Sentimental Journey"

His special train took him overnight from Knoxville, Tenn., to South Charleston, where he made what he termed a "sentimental journey" through the ordnance plant built while he was assistant secretary of the navy in World war days.

Addressing the people of nearby Charleston by radio he said he was impressed because "what was started twenty-three years ago now is bearing full fruit."

At his press conference he said a $20,000,000 appropriation pending in Congress would be used for expansion and reconditioning at the ordnance plant. The establishment is now operating on a limited scale with part of its facilities leased to the Carnegie-Illinois steel corporation for heat treatment of armor plate.

The old projectile plant, the president said, will be used now to make guns for the navy because there is a large shortage of the latter.

Governor Homer A. Holt met the president at South Charleston and accompanied him on the special as far as White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Senator M. M. Neely, Rep. Joe L. Smith and A. B. Koontz, Democratic National Committeeman, also made part of the trip in West Virginia.

A crowd estimated at 2,000 people was on the platform at White Sulphur to meet him.

WAR VETERANS REPORT ON WILLKIE DRIVE

By The Associated Press

The power of half a hundred over-age United States destroyers was thrown yesterday (Tuesday) into the Battle of Britain on the side of the besieged United Kingdom and the British, jubilant, predicted the effect would be a telling one.

It was a trade, in part, for naval and aid bases in the Western Atlantic, along with definite assurance of Britain's intentions never to sink or surrender her mighty navy, come what may.

In Rumania, at the same time, three men attempted to assissinate King Carol but were frustrated in their move to kill the man who recently bowed to German and Italian dictates and surrendered about half of his rich Transylvanian province to Hungary in the Vienna settlement.

Guardists Suspected

It was an alleged Iron Guardist plot to seize power and place Prince Mihai on the throne. Seven shots were fired at the lighted palace windows after a group of men broke into the gardens. One guard and one of the attacking gunmen were wounded, and other groups of Iron Guardists attacked the Bucharest radio station and central telephone headquarters.

The British, whose fighters and anti-aircraft fire drove back three attempts by the Germans to raid London yesterday, hailed with delight the news that their navy would get the U. S. destroyers at the price of a string of bases reaching approximately 2,100 miles from New Foundland to the South American continent.

The anonouncement of the trade, made by President Roosevelt, occasioned no surprise in Germany but official circles said all aspects of the case would have to be studied before the German attitude could be defined.

However, unofficial German sources said the move was too late to help England.

The president's action stirred a storm of controversy in Congressional circles in Washington. However, Congressional approval is not required to make the trade effective, it was said.

British Announce Successes

The British, while throwing back the massed German attackers, announced new successful attacks on enemy bases from Norway to Italy, including heavy raids on a power plant at Genoa, dynamite works at Cologne, and gun emplacements on the Nazi-held French coast.

The Germans started the war's second year by hammering day and night at British harbors and airfields. German reports said heavy damage was inflicted on British ports and bases in raids Monday night.

Italy's airmen reported damage to a British battleship, an aircraft carrier, a cruiser and a destroyer in the central Mediterranean in raids by small dive bombers developed expressly to harass British shipping.

The far-away French island of Tahiti, in the South Pacific, has decided to continue the war against Germany at the side of Britain, Gen. Charles De Gaulle said in London. General De Gaulle, leader of French forces who have refused to accept the armistice with the Axis powers, previously has announced that French equatorial Africa and New Caledonia would carry on the fight against Germany.

Called Act

vessel of war, with any intent or under any agreement or contract, written or oral, that such vessel shall be delivered to belligerent nation x x x."

The "over-age" destroyers, Jackson said, were clearly not built, armed, or equipped with any such intent or with reasonable cause to believe that they would ever enter the service of a belligerent.

No "Mosquito Boats"

As to "mosquito boats" now nearing completion, whose proposed transfer to the British was stopped recently when the attorney general said that it would seem to violate the 1917 law, Jackson said he was still of the opinon that their transfer was prohibited.

If they were turned over to the British, he ruled, they would have been built for the British to the extent of the work done in completing them.

Acting swiftly to put into operation the agreement concerning air and naval bases, the army and navy announced that a ten-man board representing both services left by plane today for Bermuda to examine sites for defense outposts there. Officials said the group would fly to Norfolk, Va., and there board a navy cruiser bound for Bermuda, where it would meet British experts.

Whether Congress would have to act on authorizing legislation and appropriation bills before base construction could begin was a matter of conjecture.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval Committee said the navy already had $10,000,000 for use in construction of auxiliary air bases which might be used in connection with the new program.

He expressed belief, however, that both authorizing legislation and appropriations would be, needed to establish naval bases on British territory.

Vinson suggested also that the president might use some of the $200,000,000 defense fund over which Congress has biven the president wide discretionary authority.

Like British Warships

The navy department, preparing to go through with the deal as quickly as possible, announced that the destroyers involved were of the 1,200-ton type, carrying four-inch guns and twenty-one-inch torpedo tubes—the exact size used by Britain.

All were completed in 1922 or prior to that time, the navy said, and thus were "over-age." The navy figures that a restroyer no longer retains maximum effectiveness after it is sixteen years old.

In the interest of the safety of the ships, their names were not disclosed.

But all were on the eastern seaboard, it was said, and many of them had been in service as part of the "neutrality patrol," and six of them were in Boston and would be delivered by September 6. They will be sailed to Canadian ports by their present crews and there turned over to British crews.

The naval and air bases to be acquired by the United States are in Newfoundland, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Antigua, Trinidad and British Guiana, the last situated on the South American mainland.

Get Naval Bases

The Newfoundland and Bermuda bases, Mr. Roosevelt said in his message, were gifts "generously given and gladly received," while the others were in exchange for the destroyers.

"This is not inconsistent in any sense with out status of peace," the chief executive said. "Still less is it a threat against any nation. It is an epochal and far-reaching act of preparation for continental defense in the face of grave danger.

"Preparation for defense is an inalienable prerogative of a soverign state. Under present circumstances this exercise of sovereign right is essential to the maintenance of our peace and safety. This is the most important action in the reinforcement of our national defense that has been taken snice the Louisiana purchase. Then as now, considerations of safety from overseas attack were fundamental.

"The value to the western hemisphere of these outposts of security is beyond calculation. Their need has long been recognized by our country, and especially by those primarily charged with the duty of charting and organizing our own naval and military defense.

"They are essential to the protection of the Panama Canal, Central America, the northern portion of South America, the Antilles, Canada, Mexico, and our own eastern and gulf seaboards. Their consequent importance in hemispheric defense is obvious. For these reasons I have taken advantage of the present opportunity to acquire them."

In addition to Jackson's opinion, copies of notes exchanged between Secretary Hull and the British ambassador, Lord Lothian, were attached to the message.

The latter set forth the locations of the bases, stipulated that they were to be held by the United States on a 99-year lease and that the private owners of the property involved were to be compensated.

To this, Hull replied that the president had directed him to say:

Hull's Acceptance

"The government of the United States appreciates the declarations and the generous action of his majesty's government as contained in your communication which are destined to enhance the national security of the United States and greatly to strengthen its ability to cooperate effectively with the other nations of the Americas in the defense of the Western Hemisphere. It therefore gladly accepts the proposals.

"The government of the United States will immediately designate experts to meet with experts designated by his majesty's government to determine upon the exact location of the naval and air bases mentioned in your communication under acknowledgement.

"In consideration of the declarations above quoted, the government of the United States will immediately transfer to his majesty's government 50 United States navy destroyers generally referred to as the 1,200-ton type.

Senate in Recess

The announcement found the Senate in recess and many of its members out of town. Plans are that the chamber will assemble tomorrow and adjourn at once in respect to the late Senator Lundeen of Minnesota, who was killed Saturday night in air transport accident. But on Thursday an outpouring of argument was plainly indicated.

Senator Nye (R-ND), for one, was indignant at the transaction.

The United States, he said, has "already reached that stage of advancement into Europe's war where written laws, and existing treaties mean nothing to the executive, if his purpose is stalled by those laws and treaties."

The Senate, Nye asserted, should be permitted to pass upon the deal.

Senator Adams (D-Colo) challenged the president's legal right to make the destroyer transfer and said he was "fearful that these transactions will have a tendency to bring the United States another step nearer to involvement in the European war."

Barkley Praises Deal

Taking the opposite view, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic Senate leader, praised the deal as "one of the greatest accomplishments in behalf of national and hemispheric defense that has ever been consummated in the history of the United States."

He said he saw no need for Congressional approval, and that Congress had recently enacted legislation approving the transfer of was equipment to England when the equiptment had been declared "overage" by the chief of naval operations.

(The navy announced that Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, had certified that the destroyer transfer would strengthen, rather than weaken the national defense.)

Senator Schwartz (D-Wyo) sand that "England is fighting our fight now," and that he favored "any aid we can give them." Senator Hatch (D-NM) approved, and expressed a belief that the move met with the approval of a majority of the Senate.

The House was tensely debating the peace-time conscription bill when Rep. Fish (R-Ny) interrupted the discusion to denounce the transaction as "virtually an act of war." Hitler would be "perfectly within the law," he added, if he should declare war on the United States at once.

Claims Law Violated

"The action of the president usurps the powers of Congress," he shouted. "it violates the laws of the United States and international law."

Rep. Short (R-Mo) also called the transaction "an act of war," without the qualifying "virtually" used by fish.

Chairman May (D-Ky) of the House Military Committee called the transaction "gratifying" and said he had "long favored acquisition of a chain of air bases off the shore of the Western Hemisphere as essential to enforcement of the Monroe doctrine and insurance of protection of the continental United States."

From Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the naval committee came an assertion that the bases would "materially strengthen our defense."

"It's a forward step in our total defense plan," he said. "The attorney general has held that the destroyers can be transferred in exchange for the bases and he is the one to whom the president looks for legal advice."

Germany Unmoved By Warship Deal

Official Circles Cautious in Comment, Minimize Importance

BERLIN, Sept. 3 (AP)—President Roosevelt's announcement of the transfer of fifty over-age U. S. destroyers to Great Britain caused no apparent surprise here tonight and there was no spontaneous reaction.

Official circles and authorized spokesmen were cautious in their comment.

"It's a question of conceivable vast import in relation to which the German attitude could not be defined before a thoroughgoing study of all aspects of international law involved," one spokesman said.

Without in any way reflecting the official view of the government, many Germans were saying: "it's too late to help England."

These people feel the transfer of the destroyers will be inadequate help to swing the balance in favor of Britain.

Other German sources, still not reflecting the official view, observed that the transfer was a good deal for the United States, holding that ninety-nine-year leases meant, for all practical purposes, permanent possession of British properties in the Western Hemisphere.

German Raiders

across the channel this afternoon indicated the British were attempting once more to smash German gun emplacements on French soil from which shells have been dropped on the English coast.

London's first alarm of the day, at 10:22 a. m., (4:22 a. m., EST) came soon after a large force of bombers and scores of Nazi fighters, roared over the coast toward the capital. There were hundreds of planes in the formation.

British Give Battle

British fighters immediately rose to the battle.

After an hour, the Germans jettisoned their bombs and turned back with the British in pursuit.

Soon the Britons returned, several doing their "victory roll" to indicate further triumphs over the Nazis.

The Germans—observers said 300 planes—quickly returned to the fray with another huge assault, this time over the Thames estuary. The second alarm in London sounded at 2:50 p. m. (8:50 a. m., EST), but again the battle was fought out before it reached the city's environs.

Another time he was coming back to England on leave. Midway over the English channel he met two German Heinkels on patrol. Dickie shot them both down.

He could do almost anything with a plane. He trained like a fighter, watched his weight like an actress and knew only one love—aviation.

At the airport where he was based they say merely "Dickie's gone." But they add hopefully, "Hell, he's too good to crash. If he wasn't killed he'll be captured and no prison camp can hold him."

Tiny Plant Cells Kill Many Fish

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—The death of numerous fish in Back River last month was attributed today to the accumulation of tiny plant cells on the gill surfaces of fish.

In a report to the State Game and Inland Fish Commission, George L. Hall, chief engineer of the State Health Department, said the plant cells caused the fish to suffocate.

At the request of the Fish Commission, Hall examined Green slime taken from Back river. He found that it consisted of numerous cells of plants which grow on the river bottom.

Presence of the plant in the river is normal, Hall reported, but said its "unusual prolific growth" was due to "a combination of circumstances tending to promote growth."

He explained that the plant requires sun-light, clear water and an abundance of dissolved carbon dioxide for growth. Last month's hot spell promoted the plant growth it was pointed out.

Concert Will Feature Festival at Oldtown

A concert by the Lancaster band, of Frostburg, directed by R. Hillary Lancaster, piano-accordian selections by Miss Margaret Maloney, of Cumberland, and entertainment by Alston Mallow and his "Hill Billy Six" of Flintstone, will feature the festival of the Ladies' Aid Society and the Oldtown Methodist church tomorrow at 5 p. m. at the church.

The program is being arranged by Mrs. Carol Dever, president of the ladies aid.

Three Reimbursed for Early Departure of Love Point Ferry

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—Three Baltimoreans who missed the Love Point ferry Aug. 11 and spent $3.01 each in reaching their destination, each have been reimbursed $2.26, Public Service Commission officials said today.

In complaining letters to the Public Service Commission and the Baltimore and Eastern Railroad, ferry operators, the trio said the boat left before schedule.

B. B. Bradley, R. L. Dienhart and W. H. Simms said they spent $3.01 each to eat, ride to the Matapeake ferry, cross the bay and go to Baltimore on the train.

They asked to be reimbursed. R. H. Soulsby, general freight and passenger agent, agreed to pay each $2.26 to offset transportation costs but balked on the seventy-five-cent dinner items.

"In view of the fact that they would have had to have dinner somewhere, we did not feel obligated to reimburse them for this amount", he wrote the public service commission.

The trio were happy to get the $2.26 and let the matter drop there.

Interpreting The War News

Acquisition of a fleet of outmoded but extremely useful destroyers from the United States should go far toward enabling Great Britain to head off a threatened crisis in the war at sea which has been obscured by the conflict in the air.

Almost as much as Britain's lifeline depends on the convoy system for merchant ships, the convoys must rely on destroyers for protection from bombers and U-boats. And the admiralty just now may be able to keep at sea no more than a fourth the number of fast little warships that were available for all purposes a year ago.

Need 100 Destroyers

Instead of fifty, the British could use 100 to good effect if information reaching Washington is correct. Aside from escorting cargo vessels, destroyers are urgently needed to help safeguard England against invasion, to operate in the Mediterranean against Italy and to help maintain the prodigious blockade of all Europe.

The Allies started the war with 255 destroyers, American naval data shows. Sixty of these, the British have indicated, were lost with the collapse of France and the sinking of thirty others by planes or U-boats has been admitted.

Of the remaining 165, so many require repairs and overhaul after attacks that some naval men suspect the admiralty now is able to count on no more than sixty or seventy-five.

There have been some replacements but new craft that are being rushed to completion will be unavailable in large numbers until next year.

Convoy Routes Longer

With France out of the picture and Italy an active foe, the need for destroyers has multiplied. The convoy routes are far longer now and more exposed.

The American destroyers are being turned over to Britain under circumstances which inevitably suggest 1917. Then there was a critical shortage of the naval weapon.

On the urgent recommendation of Admiral William S. Sims and Britain's Admiral Sir John Jellico, the first substantial American aid was in the form of a squadron of eighteen destroyers which reached Queenstown, Ireland, four weeks after the United States declared war on the Kaiser.

In succeeding weeks this country sent others and also a fleet of yachts, revenue cutters, torpedo boats and tugs. They made possible the establishment of the convoy system and the Allies were saved at sea.

Believes Maryland Free of Paralysis

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—Despite epidemics of infantile paralysis in nearby Virginia, and West Virginia, Doctor C. H. Halliday of the state health department said today "we don't anticipate any outbreak of the disease in Maryland."

Doctor Halliday said so far this year four cases of infantile paralysis were reported in the counties and two cases in Baltimore city. Last year a total of seven cases were reported in the counties and twenty in Baltimore city.

The health department official said one of the police was reported in Montgomery county in January and another in June and that the two other cases occurred in Baltimore county in July and in Harford county in August.

One Baltimore city resident was stricken in May and another in August.

Oystermen Prepare For Season Opening

CRISFIELD, MD., Sept. 3, (AP) — Watermen and packers of this "seafood capital of the world" busily prepared today for the opening of the 1940-41 oyster season in Chesapeake Bay.

Crisfield oystermen said today that reports received from the Oyster Institute of North America after a survey of production centers indicated a normal supply would be available, with excellent quality for so early in the season.

In the north, the institute declared, relatively smaller stocks of large oysters and increased costs of production "presage firmer prices" than last season.

Conditions in the Chesapeake appear favorable for a normal crop of oysters of better than average size, the institute said.

with the words: "for once I've got some good news for you."

On the street the little man read President Roosevelt's message, and, despite its assurance that the deal does not in any way affect the United States' status of peace, his usual reaction was something like this:

Churchill To Explain

"It looks like we've got someone with us at last, eh mate?"

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, who will describe the agreement to the House of Commons on Thursday, went tonight to see the king and, undoubtedly, to discuss the arrangements in the light of their significance to the empire.

That agreement in principle had been reached on the air and naval bases was made known here two weeks ago, but the British had waited anxiously for the news of the destroyers; especially so since Churchill told parliment a fortnight back that Britain hoped America would see fit to send these "timely reinforcements" to bridge the gap between the British peacetime flotillas of 1939 and the wartime flotillas they expect to have by 1941.

Modified Plan

provision, by Senators Overton (D-La.) and Russell (D-Ga.), would empower the government to condemn and take over plants if a satisfactory operating arrangement could not be worked out with the owner.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Naval Committee announced he would propose still a third version of this "draft industry," suggestion, closely resembling the modification of the military committee but omitting a section of the latter making refusal to comply a felony purishable by a $50,000 fine.

Committee Not "Inspired"

Meanwhile Senator Overton termed "wholly without foundation" a statement he attributed to Wendell Willkie that the Senate provision was directed or inspired by the administration.

In the House debate it was mostly a day for opponents of compulsory peace-time military training. There was frequent applause in the packed galleries for speeches criticizing the program as unnecesary and violative of democratic principles.

General discussion of the legislation will continue until tomorrow night. Then amendments will be considered, starting Thursday noon, and a final vote is scheduled for Friday or Saturday.

Schools Open in Four Counties

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—School bells, the bugaboo of youngsters, peeled in four counties today, summoning the first group of Maryland school children back to their studies.

Children in Washington, Garrett, Wicomico and Worcester counties were none too happy about having to resume their lessons today, after a full summer devoted to play.

Many mothers, on the other hand, were glad to pack lunches and "see their children off" because to them it meant "getting back to normal" once again.

And there was no grumbling from proprietors of school supply stores who are doing a "land-office" business selling their wares.

Among the schools scheduled to open tomorrow include those in Caroline, Carroll, Cecil, Dorchester, Kent, St. Mary's, Queen Anne's and Montgomery counties.

Allegany schools open Thursday. Those schools which will begin fall terms Sept. 9 include those in Anne Arundel, Baltimore and Harford counties and Baltimore City.

Ellerslie Man Bitten By Copperhead Snake

Ward Rush, 35, of Ellerslie, was admitted to Allegany hospital Monday afternoon after being bitten by a copperhead snake.

Hospital attendants said Rush was in the woods near Hyndman, Pa., when he was bitten on the left leg above the ankle by the reptile. He was reported recovering yesterday.

Death Toll in Prison Break 4; 3 Hostages Held

Twenty-five Still at Large of 36 Who Escaped in Louisiana

COLUMBIA, La., Sept. 3 (AP)—The death toll in Arkansas' sensational Labor day prison farm break stood at four tonight and three High School students were held hostage as armed citizens and peace officers sought other members of the desperate band.

Nine of the thirty-six convicts who shot their way to freedom yesterday from the Cummins prison farm in Arkansas were recaptured during the night-and-day-long search through two states.

Frank Conley, 34, one of the ring-leaders in the mashed escape, was shot down by posse bullets on the levee of the Ouachita river here at noon today, only fifty yards from the spot where Frank Gartman, a posseman, was killed last midnight.

The fleeing convicts killed a guard in their break for freedom. The body of an unidentified convict was washed ashore in the river near the prison farm today.

State Superintendent of Police Steve Alford sent 100 state police here to join nearly 1,000 armed citizens and peace officers who believed they had surrounded Conley's five associates in their frantic efforts to rescue the children.

Two girls and a boy, all about 16, were seized near Rayville, La., last night when the six convicts fleeing into a forest marsh near here took their automobile. Using the youngsters as a shield, the convicts escaped one trap last night, fleeing deeper into the swamp, a well-known hideout for desperadoes.

Two of the desperadoes were taken in a gun bottle near Texarkana, far from the prison farm, six others were caught without bloodshed and one was found shot and wounded in a negro cabin in Arkansas. Twenty-five still were at large. Most of them believed hiding near the prison farm.

Willkie Deplores Methods Used in Leasing Warships

Believed Congress Should Have Had Chance To Discuss Action

RUSHVILLE, IND., Sept. 3, (AP) — Although declaring "the country will undoubtedly approve" of the administration's trade of destroyers for naval base rights in British possessions, Wendell L. Willkie said today it was regrettable President Roosevelt "did not deem it necessary" to obtain prior Congressional approval or permit public discussion.

Willkie handed reporters this formal statement at a press conference in his back yard:

"The country will undoubtedly approve of the program to add to our naval and air bases and assistance given to Great Britain. It is regrettable however, that the president did not deem it necessary in connection with this proposal, to secure the approval of Congress or permit public discussion prior to adoption.

"The people have a right to know of such important commitments prior to and not after made.

Must Be Careful

"We must be extremely careful in these times when the struggle in the world is between democracy and totalitarianism not to eliminate or destroy the Democratic processes while seeking to preserve democracy.

"It is the contention of the totalitarian rulers that democracy is not effective. We must prove that it is effective by making full use of its process. Congress has constitutional functions as important and sacred as those of the chief executive."

Asked whether the Anglo-American exchange arrangement constituted "an act of war," the Republican presidential nominee replied:

"That is one of the things debate and discussion would have completely clarified."

Own Views Not Stated

Willkie's statement did not specifically express his own views regarding the agreement and he declined to elaborate for publication.

Asked for comment on President Roosevelt's Tennessee address yesterday, Willkie asserted "when I make political speeches I resignate them as such."

Announcing the Republican National Committee would ask that he be given free radio time equal to that given Mr. Roosevelt, Willkie said he wanted to use it "to make my political speeches."

Told that Senator Overton (D-La.) had disclaimed administration inspiration for his Senate-approved proposal to permit the government to seize certain defense facilities Willkie asked: "If that is true, why didn't the president say so?"

Willkie, an opponent of the Overton plan, had demanded previously that the chief executive state his position regarding the proposal.

Roosevelt Visits

get too far away from the national capital in these times.

A final decision on the agreement, he said, was made when his special train passed through Washington Sunday afternoon and Secretary Hull came aboard for a conference.

Mr. Roosevelt's arrival in Washington tonight was to mark the end of a week's absence, spent partly at his home in Hyde Park, N. Y., and partly on a speaking trip into the south.

In what appeared in retrospect to be a planned prelude to the announcement of the defense base and destroyer arrangements the president had pounded away on national defense themes in Labor Day addresses in which he dedicated the TVA'S Chickamauga dam and the Great Smoky Mountains National park.

He had spoken with exceptional vigor of the dangers he saw for America and of the needs of the nation to "prepare in a thousand ways" to meet them.

"Sentimental Journey"

His special train took him overnight from Knoxville, Tenn., to South Charleston, where he made what he termed a "sentimental journey" through the ordnance plant built while he was assistant secretary of the navy in World war days.

Addressing the people of nearby Charleston by radio he said he was impressed because "what was started twenty-three years ago now is bearing full fruit."

At his press conference he said a $20,000,000 appropriation pending in Congress would be used for expansion and reconditioning at the ordnance plant. The establishment is now operating on a limited scale with part of its facilities leased to the Carnegie-Illinois steel corporation for heat treatment of armor plate.

The old projectile plant, the president said, will be used now to make guns for the navy because there is a large shortage of the latter.

Governor Homer A. Holt met the president at South Charleston and accompanied him on the special as far as White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Senator M. M. Neely, Rep. Joe L. Smith and A. B. Koontz, Democratic National Committeeman, also made part of the trip in West Virginia.

A crowd estimated at 2,000 people was on the platform at White Sulphur to meet him.

WAR VETERANS REPORT ON WILLKIE DRIVE

Summary of War News

By The Associated Press

The power of half a hundred overage United States destroyers was thrown yesterday (Tuesday) into the Battle of Britain on the side of the besieged United Kingdom and the British, jubilant, predicted the effect would be a telling one.

It was a trade, in part, for naval and aid bases in the Western Atlantic, along with definite assurance of Britain's intentions never to sink or surrender her mighty navy, come what may.

In Rumania, at the same time, three men attempted to assissinate King Carol but were frustrated in their move to kill the man who recently bowed to German and Italian dictates and surrendered about half of his rich Transylvanian province to Hungary in the Vienna settlement.

Guardists Suspected

It was an alleged Iron Guardist plot to seize power and place Prince Mihai on the throne. Seven shots were fired at the lighted palace windows after a group of men broke into the gardens. One guard and one of the attacking gunmen were wounded, and other groups of Iron Guardists attacked the Bucharest radio station and central telephone headquarters.

The British, whose fighters and anti-aircraft fire drove back three attempts by the Germans to raid London yesterday, hailed with delight the news that their navy would get the U. S. destroyers at the price of a string of bases reaching approximately 2,100 miles from New Foundland to the South American continent.

The announcement of the trade, made by President Roosevelt, occasioned no surprise in Germany but official circles said all aspects of the case would have to be studied before the German attitude could be defined.

However, unofficial German sources said the move was too late to help England.

The president's action stirred a storm of controversy in Congressional circles in Washington. However, Congressional approval is not required to make the trade effective, it was said.

British Announce Successes

The British, while throwing back the massed German attackers, announced new successful attacks on enemy bases from Norway to Italy, including heavy raids on a power plant at Genoa, dynamite works at Cologne, and gun emplacements on the Nazi-held French coast.

The Germans started the war's second year by hammering day and night at British harbors and airfields. German reports said heavy damage was inflicted on British ports and bases in raids Monday night.

Italy's airmen reported damage to a British battleship, an aircraft carrier, a cruiser and a destroyer in the central Mediterranean in raids by small dive bombers developed expressly to harass British shipping.

The far-away French island of Tahiti, in the South Pacific, has decided to contiue the war against Germany at the side of Britain, Gen. Charles De Gaulle said in London. General De Gaulle, leader of French forces who have refused to accept the armistice with the Axis powers, previously has announced that French equatorial Africa and New Caledonia would carry on the fight against Germany.

Called Act

vessel of war, with any intent or under any agreement or contract, written or oral, that such vessel shall be delivered to belligerent nation x x x."

The "over-age" destroyers, Jackson said, were clearly not built, armed, or equipped with any such intent or with reasonable cause to believe that they would ever enter the service of a belligerent.

No "Mosquito Boats"

As to "mosquito boats" now nearing completion, whose proposed transfer to the British was stopped recently when the attorney general said that it would seem to violate the 1917 law, Jackson said he was still of the opinon that their transfer was prohibited.

If they were turned over to the British, he ruled, they would have been built for the British to the extent of the work done in completing them.

Acting swiftly to put into operation the agreement concerning air and naval bases, the army and navy announced that a ten-man board representing both services left by plane today for Bermuda to examine sites for defense outposts there. Officials said the group would fly to Norfolk, Va., and there board a navy cruiser bound for Bermuda, where it would meet British experts.

Whether Congress would have to act on authorizing legislation and appropriation bills before base construction could begin was a matter of conjecture.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval Committee said the navy already had $10,000,000 for use in construction of auxillary air bases which might be used in connection with the new program.

He expressed belief, however, that both authorizing legislation and appropriations would be, needed to establish naval bases on British territory.

Vinson suggested also that the president might use some of the $200,000,000 defense fund over which Congress has given the president wide discretionary authority.

Like British Warships

The navy department, preparing to go through with the deal as quickly as possible, announced that the destroyers involved were of the 1,200-ton type, carrying four-inch guns and twenty-one-inch torpedo tubes—the exact size used by Britain.

All were completed in 1922 or prior to that time, the navy said, and thus were "over-age." The navy figures that a restroyer no longer retains maximum effectiveness after it is sixteen years old.

In the interest of the safety of the ships, their names were not disclosed.

But all were on the eastern seaboard, it was said, and many of them had been in service as part of the "neutrality patrol," and six of them were in Boston and would be delivered by September 6. They will be sailed to Canadian ports by their present crews and there turned over to British crews.

The naval and air bases to be acquired by the United States are in Newfoundland, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Antigua, Trinidad and British Guiana, the last situated on the South American mainland.

Get Naval Bases

The Newfoundland and Bermuda bases, Mr. Roosevelt said in his message, were gifts "generously given and gladly received," while the others were in exchange for the destroyers.

"This is not inconsistent in any sense with out status of peace," the chief executive said. "Still less is it a threat against any nation. It is an epochal and far-reaching act of preparation for continental defense in the face of grave danger.

"Preparation for defense is an inalienable prerogative of a soverign state. Under present circumstances this exercise of sovereign right is essential to the maintenance of our peace and safety. This is the most important action in the reinforcement of our national defense that has been taken snice the Louisiana purchase. Then as now, considerations of safety from overseas attack were fundamental.

"The value to the western hemisphere of these outposts of security is beyond calculation. Their need has long been recognized by our country, and especially by those primarily charged with the duty of charting and organizing our own naval and military defense.

"They are essential to the protection of the Panama Canal, Central America, the northern portion of South America, the Antilles, Canada, Mexico, and our own eastern and gulf seaboards. Their consequent importance in hemispheric defense is obvious. For these reasons I have taken advantage of the present opportunity to acquire them."

In addition to Jackson's opinion, copies of notes exchanged between Secretary Hull and the British ambassador, Lord Lothian, were attached to the message.

The latter set forth the locations of the bases, stipulated that they were to be held by the United States on a 99-year lease and that the private owners of the property involved were to be compensated.

To this, Hull replied that the president had directed him to say:

Hull's Acceptance

"The government of the United States appreciates the declarations and the generous action of his majesty's government as contained in your communication which are destined to enhance the national security of the United States and greatly to strengthen its ability to cooperate effectively with the other nations of the Americas in the defense of the Western Hemisphere. It therefore gladly accepts the proposals.

"The government of the United States will immediately designate experts to meet with experts designated by his majesty's government to determine upon the exact location of the naval and air bases mentioned in your communication under acknowledgement.

"In consideration of the declarations above quoted, the government of the United States will immediately transfer to his majesty's government 50 United States navy destroyers generally referred to as the 1,200-ton type.

Senate in Recess

The announcement found the Senate in recess and many of its members out of town. Plans are that the chamber will assemble tomorrow and adjourn at once in respect to the late Senator Lundeen of Minnesota, who was killed Saturday night in air transport accident. But on Thursday an outpouring of argument was plainly indicated.

Senator Nye (R-ND), for one, was indignant at the transaction.

The United States, he said, has "already reached that stage of advancement into Europe's war where written laws, and existing treaties mean nothing to the executive, if his purpose is stalled by those laws and treaties."

The Senate, Nye asserted, should be permitted to pass upon the deal.

Senator Adams (D-Colo) challenged the president's legal right to make the destroyer transfer and said he was "fearful that these transactions will have a tendency to bring the United States another step nearer to involvement in the European war."

Barkley Praises Deal

Taking the opposite view, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic Senate leader, praised the deal as "one of the greatest accomplishments in behalf of national and hemispheric defense that has ever been consummated in the history of the United States."

He said he saw no need for Congressional approval, and that Congress had recently enacted legislation approving the transfer of was equipment to England when the equiptment had been declared "overage" by the chief of naval operations.

(The navy announced that Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, had certified that the destroyer transfer would strengthen, rather than weaken the national defense.)

Senator Schwartz (D-Wyo) sand that "England is fighting our fight now," and that he favored "any aid we can give them." Senator Hatch (D-NM) approved, and expressed a belief that the move met with the approval of a majority of the Senate.

The House was tensely debating the peace-time conscription bill when Rep. Fish (R-Ny) interrupted the discusion to denounce the transaction as "virtually an act of war." Hitler would be "perfectly within the law," he added, if he should declare war on the United States at once.

Claims Law Violated

"The action of the president usurps the powers of Congress," he shouted. "It violates the laws of the United States and international law."

Rep. Short (R-Mo) also called the transaction "an act of war," without the qualifying "virtually" used by fish.

Chairman May (D-Ky) of the House Military Committee called the transaction "gratifying" and said he had "long favored acquisition of a chain of air bases off the shore of the Western Hemisphere as essential to enforcement of the Monroe doctrine and insurance of protection of the continental United States."

From Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the naval committee came an assertion that the bases would "materially strengthen our defense."

"It's a forward step in our total defense plan," he said. "The attorney general has held that the destroyers can be transferred in exchange for the bases and he is the one to whom the president looks for legal advice."

Germany Unmoved By Warship Deal

Official Circles Cautious in Comment, Minimize Importance

BERLIN, Sept. 3 (AP)—President Roosevelt's announcement of the transfer of fifty over-age U. S. destroyers to Great Britain caused no apparent surprise here tonight and there was no spontaneous reaction.

Official circles and authorized spokesmen were cautious in their comment.

"It's a question of conceivable vast import in relation to which the German attitude could not be defined before a thoroughgoing study of all aspects of international law involved," one spokesman said.

Without in any way reflecting the official view of the government, many Germans were saying: "It's too late to help England."

These people feel the transfer of the destroyers will be inadequate help to swing the balance in favor of Britain.

Other German sources, still not reflecting the official view, observed that the transfer was a good deal for the United States, holding that ninety-nine-year leases meant, for all practical purposes, permanent possession of British properties in the Western Hemisphere.

across the channel this afternoon indicated the British were attempting once more to smash German gun emplacements on French soil from which shells have been dropped on the English coast.

London's first alarm of the day, at 10:22 a. m., (4:22 a. m., EST) came soon after a large force of bombers and scores of Nazi fighters, roared over the coast toward the capital. There were hundreds of planes in the formation.

British Give Battle

British fighters immediately rose to the battle.

After an hour, the Germans jettisoned their bombs and turned back with the British in pursuit.

Soon the Britons returned, several doing their "victory roll" to indicate further triumphs over the Nazis.

The Germans—observers said 300 planes—quickly returned to the fray with another huge assault, this time over the Thames estuary. The second alarm in London sounded at 2:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m., EST), but again the battle was fought out before it reached the city's environs.

He could do almost anything with a plane. He trained like a fighter, watched his weight like an actress and knew only one love—aviation.

Tiny Plant Cells Kill Many Fish

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—The death of numerous fish in Back River last month was attributed today to the accumulation of tiny plant cells on the gill surfaces of fish.

In a report to the State Game and Inland Fish Commission, George L. Hall, chief engineer of the State Health Department, said the plant cells caused the fish to suffocate.

At the request of the Fish Commission, Hall examined Green slime taken from Back river. He found that it consisted of numerous cells of plants which grow on the river bottom.

Presence of the plant in the river is normal, Hall reported, but said its "unusual prolific growth" was due to "a combination of circumstances tending to promote growth."

He explained that the plant requires sun-light, clear water and an abundance of dissolved carbon dioxide for growth. Last month's hot spell promoted the plant growth it was pointed out.

Concert Will Feature Festival at Oldtown

A concert by the Lancaster band, of Frostburg, directed by R. Hillary Lancaster, piano-accordian selections by Miss Margaret Maloney, of Cumberland, and entertainment by Alston Mallow and his "Hill Billy Six" of Flintstone, will feature the festival of the Ladies' Aid Society and the Oldtown Methodist church tomorrow at 5 p. m. at the church.

The program is being arranged by Mrs. Carol Dever, president of the ladies aid.

Three Reimbursed for Early Departure of Love Point Ferry

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—Three Baltimoreans who missed the Love Point ferry Aug. 11 and spent $3.01 each in reaching their destination, each have been reimbursed $2.26, Public Service Commission officials said today.

In complaining letters to the Public Service Commission and the Baltimore and Eastern Railroad, ferry operators, the trio said the boat left before schedule.

B. B. Bradley, R. L. Dienhart and W. H. Simms said they spent $3.01 each to eat, ride to the Matapeake ferry, cross the bay and go to Baltimore on the train.

They asked to be reimbursed. R. H. Soulsby, general freight and passenger agent, agreed to pay each $2.26 to offset transportation costs but balked on the seventy-five-cent dinner items.

"In view of the fact that they would have had to have dinner somewhere, we did not feel obligated to reimburse them for this amount", he wrote the public service commission.

The trio were happy to get the $2.26 and let the matter drop there.

Interpreting The War News

Acquisition of a fleet of outmoded but extremely useful destroyers from the United States should go far toward enabling Great Britain to head off a threatened crisis in the war at sea which has been obscured by the conflict in the air.

Almost as much as Britain's lifeline depends on the convoy system for merchant ships, the convoys must rely on destroyers for protection from bombers and U-boats. And the admiralty just now may be able to keep at sea no more than a fourth the number of fast little warships that were available for all purposes a year ago.

Need 100 Destroyers

Instead of fifty, the British could use 100 to good effect if information reaching Washington is correct. Aside from escorting cargo vessels, destroyers are urgently needed to help safeguard England against invasion, to operate in the Mediterranean against Italy and to help maintain the prodigious blockade of all Europe.

The Allies started the war with 255 destroyers, American naval data shows. Sixty of these, the British have indicated, were lost with the collapse of France and the sinking of thirty others by planes or U-boats has been admitted.

Of the remaining 165, so many require repairs and overhaul after attacks that some naval men suspect the admiralty now is able to count on no more than sixty or seventy-five.

There have been some replacements but new craft that are being rushed to completion will be unavailable in large numbers until next year.

Convoy Routes Longer

With France out of the picture and Italy an active foe, the need for destroyers has multiplied. The convoy routes are far longer now and more exposed.

The American destroyers are being turned over to Britain under circumstances which inevitably suggest 1917. Then there was a critical shortage of the naval weapon.

On the urgent recommendation of Admiral William S. Sims and Britain's Admiral Sir John Jellico, the first substantial American aid was in the form of a squadron of eighteen destroyers which reached Queenstown, Ireland, four weeks after the United States declared war on the Kaiser.

In succeeding weeks this country sent others and also a fleet of yachts, revenue cutters, torpedo boats and tugs. They made possible the establishment of the convoy system and the Allies were saved at sea.

Believes Maryland Free of Paralysis

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—Despite epidemics of infantile paralysis in nearby Virginia and West Virginia, Doctor C. H. Halliday of the state health department said today "we don't anticipate any outbreak of the disease in Maryland."

Doctor Halliday said so far this year four cases of infantile paralysis were reported in the counties and two cases in Baltimore city. Last year a total of seven cases were reported in the counties and twenty in Baltimore city.

The health department official said one of the police was reported in Montgomery county in January and another in June and that the two other cases occurred in Baltimore county in July and in Harford county in August.

One Baltimore city resident was stricken in May and another in August.

Oystermen Prepare For Season Opening

CRISFIELD, MD., Sept. 3, (AP) — Watermen and packers of this "seafood capital of the world" busily prepared today for the opening of the 1940-41 oyster season in Chesapeake Bay.

Crisfield oystermen said today that reports received from the Oyster Institute of North America after a survey of production centers indicated a normal supply would be available, with excellent quality for so early in the season.

In the north, the institute declared, relatively smaller stocks of large oysters and increased costs of production "presage firmer prices" than last season.

Conditions in the Chesapeake appear favorable for a normal crop of stands of better than average size.

with the words: "for once I've got some good news for you."

On the street the little man read President Roosevelt's message, and, despite its assurance that the deal does not in any way affect the United States' status of peace, his usual reaction was something like this:

Churchill To Explain

"It looks like we've got someone with us at last, eh mate?"

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, who will describe the agreement to the House of Commons on Thursday, went tonight to see the king and, undoubtedly, to discuss the arrangements in the light of their significance to the empire.

That agreement in principle had been reached on the air and naval bases was made known here two weeks ago, but the British had waited anxiously for the news of the destroyers; especially so since Churchill told parliment a fortnight back that Britain hoped America would see fit to send these "timely reinforcements" to bridge the gap between the British peacetime flotillas of 1939 and the wartime flotillas they expect to have by 1941.

provision, by Senators Overton (D-La.) and Russell (D-Ga.), would empower the government to condemn and take over plants if a satisfactory operating arrangement could not be worked out with the owner.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Naval Committee announced he would propose still a third version of this "draft industry," suggestion, closely resembling the modification of the military committee but omitting a section of the latter making refusal to comply a felony punishable by a $50,000 fine.

Committee Not "Inspired"

Meanwhile Senator Overton termed "wholly without foundation" a statement he attributed to Wendell Willkie that the Senate provision was directed or inspired by the administration.

In the House debate it was mostly a day for opponents of compulsory peace-time military training. There was frequent applause in the packed galleries for speeches criticizing the program as unnecesary and violative of democratic principles.

General discussion of the legislation will continue until tomorrow night. Then amendments will be considered, starting Thursday noon, and a final vote is scheduled for Friday or Saturday.

Schools Open in Four Counties

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3 (AP)—School bells, the bugaboo of youngsters, peeled in four counties today, summoning the first group of Maryland school children back to their studies.

Children in Washington, Garrett, Wicomico and Worcester counties were none too happy about having to resume their lessons today, after a full summer devoted to play.

Many mothers, on the other hand, were glad to pack lunches and "see their children off" because to them it meant "getting back to normal" once again.

And there was no grumbling from proprietors of school supply stores who are doing a "land-office" business selling their wares.

Among the schools scheduled to open tomorrow include those in Caroline, Carroll, Cecil, Dorchester, Kent, St. Mary's, Queen Anne's and Montgomery counties.

Allegany schools open Thursday. Those schools which will begin fall terms Sept. 9 include those in Anne Arundel, Baltimore and Harford counties and Baltimore City.

Ellerslie Man Bitten By Copperhead Snake

Ward Rush, 35, of Ellerslie, was admitted to Allegany hospital Monday afternoon after being bitten by a copperhead snake.

Hospital attendants said Rush was in the woods near Hyndman, Pa., when he was bitten on the left leg above the ankle by the reptile. He was reported recovering yesterday.

Death Toll in Prison Break 4; 3 Hostages Held

Twenty-five Still at Large of 36 Who Escaped in Louisiana

COLUMBIA, La., Sept. 3 (AP)—The death toll in Arkansas' sensational Labor day prison farm break stood at four tonight and three High School students were held hostage as armed citizens and peace officers sought other members of the desperate band.

Nine of the thirty-six convicts who shot their way to freedom yesterday from the Cummins prison farm in Arkansas were recaptured during the night-and-day-long search through two states.

Frank Conley, 34, one of the ring-leaders in the mashed escape, was shot down by posse bullets on the levee of the Ouachita river here at noon today, only fifty yards from the spot where Frank Gartman, a posseman, was killed last midnight.

The fleeing convicts killed a guard in their break for freedom. The body of an unidentified convict was washed ashore in the river near the prison farm today.

State Superintendent of Police Steve Alford sent 100 state police here to join nearly 1,000 armed citizens and peace officers who believed they had surrounded Conley's five associates in their frantic efforts to rescue the children.

Two girls and a boy, all about 16 were seized near Rayville, La., last night when the six convicts fleeing into a forest marsh near here took their automobile. Using the youngsters as a shield, the convicts escaped one trap last night, fleeing deeper into the swamp, a well known hideout for desperadoes.

Two of the desperadoes were taken in a gun bottle near Texarkana, far from the prison farm, six others were caught without bloodshed and one was found shot and wounded in a negro cabin in Arkansas. Twenty-five still were at large. Most of them believed hiding near the prison farm.

Hungarian Mayor Killed

The Hungarian mayor of Saint George, in the ceded area of Transylvania, hung out a Hungarian flag on the city hall and was killed by a crowd which stormed the building. Several other deaths were reported at Saint George.

At Timisoara, in South Transylvania, Italian and German consulates were wrecked, as were Hungarian and German stores.

Some circles here expressed fear that the Germans might establish a complete military occupation of Rumania—thus making this nation a battleground if Russia should move further to the southwest.

The attempt upon King Carol's life occurred within sight of hundreds.

The shooting occurred at 8:55 p. m.

While crowds strolled casually along in front of the palace, an automobile with three men halted at one of the palace gates. They jumped from the car and ran inside on the driveway, one of them crying:

"Long live the iron guards." (A pro-Fascist but strongly nationalistic organization.)

Then, they began firing rapidly at the palace window until the surprised guards fell upon them.

Leave Manifestos

Left in the palace grounds were heaps of crudely printed manifestos reviewing the situation which led the government, under pressure of Germany and Italy, to agree to give up northern Transylvania to Hungary.

These leaflets, officials said, contained "scurrilous attacks" on the king.

All telephone communication was cut off.

Inside the palace, at the time of the attack, the tired monarch's council of ministers was reported holding another in an almost endless series of meetings that had followed the crisis.

THE DAILY STORY

THE TRAP

The Carsons Were Bad, Bold Boys, and Only a Man Who Never Carried a Gun Could Hope To Catch Them

BY FRANK BENNETT

Hud and I stood by the sand-pocked window in the Oasis Saloon, looking out into the hot dry street. A stocky middle-aged man was riding by, his pinto kicking up little bubbles of dust that rose and fell in the still air like puffs of smoke.

"Sometimes," Hud said slowly, pointing a long brown finger at the rider, "I think he's too big a fool to be sheriff."

I stared at Hud in surprise. "I think he's pretty smart," I defended. "His idea of a gunless Saturday certainly has cut down on the Saturday night shootings."

Hud snorted. "Maybe so, but just because he says it's against the law to carry a gun from 10 o'clock Saturday morning until 6 Sunday morning is no sign the boys won't carry guns."

It was Saturday afternoon. I glanced about the room. There wasn't a gun in sight. Hud's eyes followed my gaze.

"Looks nice, don't it-" he grunted. "But it's like this. The law-abiding people, like you and me and some others, will obey the rule. But the bad ones, like the Carsons and two or three others, will carry guns—under their shirts. Then if trouble breaks loose, what can we do?" His eyes went over the room again. "By the way, I don't see the Carsons."

"George left town an hour ago, and Pete didn't come to town. Don't you remember? Sheriff Frame kicked him out last week."

Hud frowned. "That's right. Pete's a coward and ugly as a wildcat when he's mad and twice as sneaking. Wonder where Frame's headed for."

"For old Barney's claim," I told him. "I was over to the jail, talking to him. George Carson had been in with a note from Barney. Frame was going to show me the note but couldn't find it. Guess George must have stuck it back into his pocket. Anyway, seems as if Barney thinks someone is snooping around his place. Evidently the old man has found a little gold, and it worries him.

"Did you say George brought a note from Barney?"

I nodded. Hud rolled a cigarette lit it, and tossed the match into a spittoon. "Let's go out to Barney's too."

There was a glint in his gray eyes that made me want to go along in spite of the heat.

Sheriff Frame had quite a lead on us, so we didn't see him until he was in Red Rock Gulch. And then we didn't catch up with him, for Hud insisted on staying behind.

"Don't want him to know we're following," he said.

"Don't you think he'd want us along?" I asked.

"Never can tell." Hud grunted.

We rode along in silence, getting up closer to the sheriff as we went farther into the gulch.

Suddenly a horse and rider came out from behind a mass of tumbled rocks. Frame jerked his pinto to a stop.

Hud gripped my arm. "George Carson," he gritted.

The sun glinted on a bright object about half way up the north wall of the gulch. I took a second look. The glint had caught Hud's eye, too.

"Pete Carson!" Hud breathed.

"Oh for a gun!" I thought helplessly. And a fly buzzed around my ear, while in the distance the sound of a stray calf bawling broke the awful stillness that had seemed to grip the entire world.

And then Hud's hand went under his shirt and came out with one of his black-butted .45's. I might have known there would be no gunless days for Hud. Those .45's were as much a part of him as were his legs and arms.

"Don't want him to know we're following," he said.

Then things happened fast. Sheriff Frame seemed to realize that he had ridden into a trap. His right hand streaked to his gun, came up. George drew, too, but the sheriff's gun went off first by a split second. The blast rocked the narrow defile.

And then a funny thing happened. Right before my eyes, Pete Carson stood up in his nest on the wall of the gulch, threw down his rifle and rolled head over heels right down in front of Frame's horse. I glanced at Hud. A curl of smoke was coming out of his gun. He had timed his shot perfectly so that it had blurred with those of the sheriff and George. No wonder the roar had been so deafening.

Hud tossed his .45 into a clump of weeds and rode forward, with me tagging right alnog behind.

Seriff Frame sat in his saddle, staring at Pete's body.

"What's a-goin' on?" Hud asked.

Frame jerked around. "I can't understand it," he gulped. He pointed at Pete. "Where'd he get that bullet in his chest?"

"Why," Hud said soberly, "I reckon that must have come from George's gun. It looked to me like his arm went up when he was hit."

The sheriff's eyes went over us, and I knew that in that quick glance he was searching for a gun-revealing bulge.

"I'd have sworn that I heard George's slug whistle by my head," Frame mumbled. "It just don't seem possible that his bullet could have hit Pete."

Hud began rolling a cigarette. "This being a gunless day, it couldn't have happened no other way," he said.

As Hud and I rode back to town, I had a sudden thought. "Your gun . . ." I began.

"I'll pick it up tomorrow," he said. "I ain't goin' to run no chances of spendin' 30 days in jail this hot weather by gettin' it now.

"And what made you take a notion to ride out there?"

He grinned. "Oh, that? I just happened to remember that Old Barney can't read or write."—Distributed by United Features Syndicate.

Why This Whopper Business, Anyway?

WHAT has come over Mr. Roosevelt that he should indulge in such a whopper as reported in a recent press conference when he was asked what position he took on the conscription of industry in peace time? Or has anything come over him?

The fact was, the president is quoted as having said in the press reports of the conference, that "he had made it a rule not to comment on legislation still pending before Congress ever since he came to office in 1933."

This came shortly after he had strongly indorsed the Burke-Wadsworth legislation; and scarcely was the presidential observation cold from the wires when the alert and nimble-witted shot the fact back at him, together with some other reminders that left Mr. Roosevelt's quoted utterance in a ridiculous light.

"Did he have nothing to say about the legislation packing the supreme court while that legislation was pending in Congress?" Willkie asked. "Did he not tell Congress to pass the Guffey Coal act irrespective of doubt about its constitutionality? If my memory serves me correctly, the president has commented many times on pending legislation, but even if he has not I think it is the clear duty of a president of the United States to state his position on important pending legislation."

Quite important, indeed, on such things as the Overton-Russell amendment to conscript industry, which Mr. Roosevelt dodged in such a miserable manner.

Since giving these reminders, Willkie has looked over the record and has found no fewer than seventeen times this year in which Mr. Roosevelt advised Congress on pending legislation.

Why should Mr. Roosevelt indulge in such a misrepresentation, which can be discerned even by a school child? Simply because Willkie pushed him into a bad corner and the president, as in the case of other queries directed at him by his opponent, feared to attempt an answer. And the reason he fears to do this is because he does not stand upon firm ground.

Mr. Roosevelt may have made it a rule never to comment upon pending legislation; but, if he did so, the rule was repeatedly broken. Perhaps that is his explanation. Anyway, it is the only one the record can support.

Tall Lying by the Nazis Seems a Stupid Thing

THE UNITED STATES ARMY TRANSPORT AMERICAN LEGION arrived safe in New York after a voyage from Petsamo, Finland, through an area which the German high command said would be navigated at the peril of the skipper and the United States government.

It is true that this was part of the very area which had been forbidden to United States ships by the federal government itself and if anything had happened to the vessel, which had on board members of the Norwegian royal family and Mrs. Harriman, United States minister to Norway, a situation would have arisen which might have brought this nation close to war with Germany.

However that may be, the captain did a good job and said he saw no mines. He did say the German wireless was in constant touch with him throughout the voyage. It repeated warnings that mines were just ahead. He further revealed that the same German radio sent out a statement that the American Legion was running short of fuel and food and that the United States had sent ships to its rescue.

The fact was, said Captain Torning, that the American Legion had 10,000 pounds of food in the ice box on arrival at its destination and fuel enough to have gone to Petsamo and back again.

Almost nightly the British information service seeks to impress the outside world with the fact that its bulletins are absolutely accurate, particularly as to the great number of Nazi planes shot down in comparison with Royal Air Force losses. The reports sound convincing and it is certain that the British are far from demoralized.

Even the most impartial observer must be inclined to believe that the Nazis do some tall lying after reading the story sent out about the American Legion.

What is inexplicable is the fact that anyone would do a thing so stupid as to circulate reports which would so soon be shown up as false. Of course if the American Legion had gone down with all on board it might not have become known that the story of a shortage of food and fuel was pure invention, but there was a reasonable probability that the ship would reach port and the dumb deception of the German wireless be exposed.

But it must always be remembered that Hitler has plainly told the world that a lie can only be effective if it is big enough.

Something the Nazis Cannot Hope To Kill

NOBODY on this side of the Atlantic and few in England—except those, of course, who have seen with their own eyes and heard with their own ears—can guess the amount of havoc wrought in repeated Nazi air raids on London. There seems little doubt that both loss of life and destruction of property have been of considerable proportions. But this much is known: The British are fighting back with a ferocity which is intensified by every terroristic Nazi raid, a ferocity which augurs ill to invaders.

A few months ago there was a bombing raid on Paris—a city as rich in beauty and art, if no richer in history and tradition, than London. It was a fairly heavy raid. Factories in the outskirts were damaged; apartment houses and schools were struck. The world-famous landmarks of Paris escaped damage; but everyone—or almost everyone—said how terrible it would be if the architectural beauties of Paris were ruined by war.

A little later, when German armies were approaching Paris, the French government proclaimed the capital an "open city" in order to avoid bombardment by heavy artillery as well as from the air. So French soldiers were ordered to retreat, without firing a shot, from the city where their forefathers had fought from barricade to barricade.

Today Paris, its architectural beauties intact, is in German hands. If it remains in German hands long enough, Paris will become another Vienna—reduced to the position of a provincial outpost of Berlin.

These are not happy thoughts. The Arc de Triomphe still stands; but what will it mean if the Nazis, or their French hirelings, stay? The world would be sorry to see St. Paul's or Westminster, St. James's or Buckingham in ruins—but new cathedrals, new abbeys, new palaces would rise on their sites if the soul of the British people lived on.

The civilized world hopes that Nelson still will stand erect in Trafalgar square when this war ends. But Nelson, himself, would grimly order that every stone of his great monument be blown to dust rather than that England surrender ships or guns or men.

Front Line of Defense Farther Eastward

AVAILABILITY of Bermuda for an aviation and doubtless later for a naval base for the United States will throw the military outposts of this nation farther eastward than they have ever been before. Geographically Bermuda is considerably closer to the United States than it is to Britain. It is not a great distance from the middle Atlantic seaboard.

Bermuda can be fortified to guard against any direct approach from Europe to these continental shores. Should bases in Newfoundland and Nova Scotia later be offered by Britain and accepted, America for the first time would have a front line to defend to the eastward.

It is a matter of note that the Bermudians sought and received assurances from Britain that American bases there were not a first step toward cession of Bermuda to the United States. Britain's islands in the West Indies probably later will seek the same assurance and they will get it. Britain has no present intention of turning any territory permanently over to the United States.

Statistics Support Kipling Statement

MORE MEN are convicted of crime than women. But among those who are convicted the proportion of deadly and vicious crimes is higher among women than men. Department of Justice statistics show that, in proportion, there are thirteen women murderers to ten men. In cases of assault the percentage of female offenders is also higher.

This may be evidence confirming an old opinion that when a woman goes bad she goes very bad, indeed. It may also confirm the secret conviction of many men that there are dark and desperate possibilities in every woman, kept under cover by convention and concern for what the neighbors may think.

Finally, it confirms, with scientific statistics and the authority of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the much-quoted statement of Kipling that "the female of the species is more deadly than the male."

Defense Hindered By the New Deal, Johnson Declares

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—"With some severity, the president refused to make public the industrial mobilization plan that has been drafted since the World war . . . In answer to a question about the plan, the president asked why he should make it public any more than publishing the plan of the Civil war. 'We are working in 1940,' adding that he was not interested in any old plans." So the Washington Post reported this noteworthy presidential testiness.

Hugh Johnson

The so-called mobilization plan is the result of years of work and study in the Army War college, the Army Industrial college and the general staff. It started with a long research for getting industry ready to equip armies and navies quickly, cheaply and efficiently. Its bases were both the successes and failures of our own industrial mobilization of 1917 and 1918. Countless hearings or studies were conducted to comb out all the errors of that effort.

Required by Law

Comparisons were made with similar experience in other countries. Since 1933, it has been increasingly plain that the startling Nazi success in rearmament was due to their adoption of our mobilization plan both in principle and detail. At frequent intervals, our plan has been revised to keep it abreast of all changes that could affect it.

This constant scientific work was not done in any eager volunteer brainstorming by ambitious army enthusiasts. It was done in compliance with a specific statuatory mandate of Congress, laid down in the law establishing the office and duties of the assistant secretary of war. It was again specifically revised in 1939 by a civilian board specifically appointed by the president to do so. It is in no sense an "old" plan. It is not only a fire-new plan but it is the only plan there is.

A Miserable Failure

The present industrial mobilization in the sense of relative comparison with our own past experience or the present experience of other nations is a miserable failure—a complete flop. The reason for that is not that it follows in any "old" plan or any kind of "new" plan either—it just doesn't follow any plan at all. The mistakes of bewildered painless 1917 are being followed and repeated with nauseating regularity—and consequent hopeless delay. They are being repeated because the president and his administrative family were so fascinated with their habit of "brilliant experimentation" that they didn't want anything to interfere with it.

Above all, they didn't want to have any other influences in government, the president wanted to be exclusively the central figure in any war effort. The various spending agencies wanted to roll their own. The only outside aid they would suffer had to be completely without authority working in merely an advisory capacity. The statement has been made more than once that the New Deal has within itself all the talent and organization needed for any war effort.

Neglect Prompts Hysteria

The plain truth is that it has no such thing. Our defensive preparations ought to be going forward under inspiring leadership with great popular enthusiasm and perfect teamwork and unity among labor, industry and government. Industrial skill and experience and a well-formed plan are necessary for that. This administration scorns all these things.

Professing to have known the danger for years, it has neglected to prepare for it until it could only be done in an atmosphere of hysterical emergency. Now that the country has demanded action, it is unwilling to take action except in its invariable method of heedless, headlong, high-pressure stampede. —Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

THE GREAT HEALER

Question Raised by Ickes Recalls the Inflammatory Speeches by Roosevelt

By FRANKLYN WALTMAN

There was one question raised by Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes in his radio tirade replying to the Wendell Willkie acceptance speech which merits an answer.

"By what warrant," asked the New Deal's Donald Duck, "does Mr. Willkie presume to accuse the president of the United States of issuing inflammatory statements and indulging in manufactured panics?"

Donald Duck Ickes undoubtedly was not seeking knowledge. He must have been asking a rhetorical question for he surely must know the answers. For one of Mr. Roosevelt's "inflammtory" statements was uttered in Donald Duck's home town of Chicago and if we are not greatly mistaken Harold Ickes was not five feet away from Mr. Roosevelt at the time.

Quarantine Speech Recalled

The time was October 5, 1937 when Mr. Roosevelt shocked the country with his "quarantine speech." In essence Mr. Roosevelt on that occasion proposed that aggressor nations throughout the world be quarantined just as local health officers quarantine patients when an epidemic of physical disease breaks out. In other words, Mr. Roosevelt proposed that the United States take the lead in policing the world.

It was this speech which marked Mr. Roosevelt's sharp reversal from an attitude of peace and neutrality which he manifested during the 1936 campaign toward a course which ever since has made many, many Americans concerned lest he was leading the country into war.

There is no intention here to defend or excuse any aggressor nation. But it is not always so clear just who the aggressor is in many conflicts and, anyway, why should the United States assume the role of branding of nations as "aggressors" when their aggression is not aimed directly against us? And why should the United States assume the role of putting down aggressors wherever they may appear by undertaking to be the moral policeman of all the world?

Mr. Roosevelt's speech at Chicago three years ago raised these questions and visibly disturbed many Americans. Was it not therefore an "inflammtory" statement? And how about the president's other frequent speeches in which he assailed and belabored other governments? Were these not inflammatory?

Attack on Italians Cited

Of course, the most flagrant example of an "inflammatory" statement, however, was contained in the president's speech last June at the University of Virginia. In that speech Mr. Roosevelt delivered a slashing attack on the Italian government, actually naming it, and attributing to it an evil and shameful course.

What is worse, Mr. Roosevelt interpolated into that speech an intemperate statement unworthy of anyone who merits the description of statesman when he asserted that "on this tenth day of June the hand that held the dagger struck it into the back of its neighbor."

Seldom in modern history has the ruler of one nation uttered such "inflammatory" and provocative words regarding a friendly government as President Roosevelt did in this speech. In effect, he accused the Italian government of stealthily stabbing a neighbor in the back. Does anyone suppose the Italian people soon will forget that insult?

How about Submarines?

Now as for "manufactured panics," surely Mr. Ickes must remember all the submarine scares which President Roosevelt undertook to conjure up last September. It will be recalled that for a period of several weeks the White House every other day or so solemnly announced submarines off our coasts—mythical submarines that were not ever reported by any other quarter.

Likewise Mr. Ickes must remember the state of panic into which Mr. Roosevelt threw the country last fall when he summarily proclaimed a national emergency. For days none knew exactly what authority Mr. Roosevelt had appropriated to himself. Indeed, none knows with certitude even now. Yet we are at peace. But Mr. Roosevelt has acted as though the country were engaged in a war.

No, Donald Duck's quacking as usual was without foundation and Wendell Willkie stood on firm, very firm, ground when he asserted that "there have been occasions when many of us have wondered if he (the president) is deliberately inciting us to war."

Union Chief Is For Willkie

From the Indianapolis Star

Expressing the belief that Republican Nominee Wendell L. Willkie will be elected to the Presidency of the United States next November, William L. Hutcheson, international president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, in a statement yesterday pledged his support to Mr. Willkie's candidacy in the coming campaign.

Mr. Hutchenson was a delegate at large from Indiana to the national Republican convention at Philadelphia.

"Wendell L. Willkie's speech of acceptance at Elwood Saturday was a common sense document which should appeal to every American," Mr. Hutchenson said.

"Mr. Willkie revealed that he has a deep insight into the American way of life. While he did not go into detail regarding his position relative to labor, his remarks were sufficiently far-reaching to indicate that he is cognizant of labor's problems. After all, these problems are not far different from the problems of all other Americans.

"Labor will play an important part in this campaign. I do not believe, however, that this great group of American citizens should be regarded as a 'class.' There has been entirely too much effort already by the New Deal administration to divide the American people into 'classes.' The man or woman who belongs to a labor union is first of all an American citizen.

"I pledge my support to Mr. Willkie in this campaign and I believe that he will be elected our next President," the statement concluded.

Many Reasons For Election Of Willkie

From The Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

There are many reasons why the voters of the United States should elect Wendell L. Willkie to the presidentity. He is a strong man. His record is clean. He is honest and able. We are confident that he does not harbor any desire to be president of the United States in perpetuity. He has respect for the fine old virtues of work and square dealing. He believes, with the founders of the nation, that the presidential term should be limited to eight years, and that only an overwhelming ambition to assume the role of dictator could lead any man to flout the tradition that has guided our presidents for a century and a half.

There are an equal number of reasonus why the voters should defeat Franklin Delano Roosevelt. No previous president has flagrantly repudiated the constitution of the United States nor defied the third-term tradition as he has done. No previous president has demanded or received such broad powers in times of peace, and no precious president has so misused the powers conferred upon him. No previous president has frittered away the nation's assets and plunged the people so deeply in debt to such little purpose. No previous president has deliberately pronounced class hatreds for selfish political reasons. It is a record that calls for repudiation at the polls in November.

You Can't Fool The Bees

From the Christian Science Monitor

The bees are buzzing around the kitchen screen door and the open windows back in the home county just about now. It's preserving time. You can tell it a hundred yards away, if the wind's right. The bees probably get the scent for a mile, and if a tray of jelly glasses or preserves is set out in the sun to "jell" to cool, they will be all over the jars in a flash, avidly seeking a stray drop of syrup.

At this time it's probably peaches—White Heaths from the fine old trees near the house. One year Mother was away from home when the peaches came ripe and Father put them up himself. He has never done talking about it. Later there will be Elbertas and perhaps a few choice J. H. Hales, so big that you can't get more than four halves in a pint Mason jar.

Wild blackberries are ripe in the pasture lot now, and the whole family knows that there's nothing like blackberry jelly — especially wild blackberry jelly. Father always insisted that a few quarts be saved for blackberry cobbler. The children liked cobbler, all right, but they had their fun picking the berries—and eating as many as they picked.

Crabapple, grape, quince, currant—they'll all have their turn, and the choicest may be placed on the shelf alongside Aunt Emma's seeded cherries, to be entered in competition at the county fair. Aunt Emma removes the pits with a needle, so cunningly that the cherries look whole. She never tires of telling about the time that the judges passed her cherries by, thinking they were un-seeded. Thereafter she labeled them, and never failed to win the blue ribbon.

Wish w had some of that jelly on a slice of homemade bread right now. . .

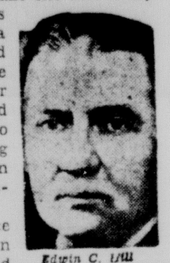
Trick Questions Foolish in Tests, Edwin Hill Says

By EDWIN C. HILL

If a hen-and-a-half lay an egg-and-a-half in a day-and-a-half, how long will it take one hen to lay a dozen eggs? It's getting so that a lad who can field a question like that has a better chance to succeed than one who knows something practical, or can do something useful.



Edwin C. Hill

In civil service examinations, in tests for fire and police departments, municipal, state and federal jobs, housing, relief and welfare work, the payroll aspirants get a workout which might floor F. P. A. or John Kieran of "Information Please". Many of these questions have no remote or conceivable connection with anything involved in any prospective job. It's something like staging a track-meet to pick lawyers or award diplomas to the best pole-vaulters or high-hurdlers.

Question Mark Quarrel

Specifically, we note the case now in court in New York. Candidates for second-grade clerk in the municipal civil service had this to contend with:

"Doe's the following require a question mark at the end: 'May I help you with the problem of reorganization of the personnel'.

They flunked seventeen candidates who said the question mark was needed. The flunked ones brought suit, and opposing lawyers are now fanning up an argument which is already becoming metaphysical and may fill learned tomes before it's over, like the cob-web dissertation of the mediaeval scholastics. The judge had to postpone the hearing so that he could find time to bone up on authorities and precedents, if any. The examiners, I believe, have contended that you are just being polite if you state your intention in the form of a question, and that the actual question mark is superfluous.

Law Bedeviled

The best judges and the best lawyers have been those who have heaved legal pedantry into the ash can and worked things out humanly and sensibly. The law has been bedeviled by a lot of abracadabra, but recently the perfectionist and procisionist have been busy in other fields to a degree which threatens to get us snarled up in subtlety until we can't turn a wheel.

I happen to know the details of one case in point. A middle-aged woman, a widow with family responsibilities, had worked seven years in the department of low-income housing inspection. She was more than ordinarily literate, had been schooled here and in Europe, spoke French, Italian and Russian, had been trained in social work and had maintained a record of the highest diligence and efficiency during the entire period.

In a shake-up in her department in which it was proposed to raise the standards for employment, she and many of her skilled and experienced associates were subjected to an academic examination, in competition with a number of girls just out of college.

A Shade Better

This woman had something perhaps a shade better than a run-of-the-mill American college education, but she has been out of college for twenty years and had no means of knowing that they were going to ask her to state the binomial theorem, refine osmosis, give the outline of the Treaty of Ghent. At any rate, she and many other women of proven skill, tact, efficiency and long experience were given the gate and in went the college girls in whose heads the hangnails of what is supposed to be education still lingered.

That housing department tried a lot of sound experience for a few educational knick-knacks has nothing to do with housing, apart from the injustice of the men who had been faithful and competent on their job.

Unfair Strikes

These new tests are supposed to be as scientific as all get out. If it's scientific to pick somebody for a technical job because he knows the prepositions used with the ablative, I'm Albert Einstein. The business takes on more than ordinary importance now-a-days as more and more people are climbing onto government payrolls, with never any sign of a let-down for a long time to come. Our country is teeming with young people of fine intelligence—and that means every one of working intelligence—and there is no reason why pedagogs and pedants should call strikes on them just because they miss trick questions.

Why This Whopper Business, Anyway?

WHAT has come over Mr. Roosevelt that he should indulge in such a whopper as reported in a recent press conference when he was asked what position he took on the conscription of industry in peace time? Or has anything come over him?

The fact was, the president is quoted as having said in the press reports of the conference, that "he had made it a rule not to comment on legislation still pending before Congress ever since he came to office in 1933."

This came shortly after he had strongly indorsed the Burke-Wadsworth legislation; and scarcely was the presidential observation cold from the wires when the alert and nimble-witted shot the fact back at him, together with some other reminders that left Mr. Roosevelt's quoted utterance in a ridiculous light.

"Did he have nothing to say about the legislation packing the supreme court while that legislation was pending in Congress?" Willkie asked. "Did he not tell Congress to pass the Guffey Coal act irrespective of doubt about its constitutionality? If my memory serves me correctly, the president has commented many times on pending legislation, but even if he has not I think it is the clear duty of a president of the United States to state his position on important pending legislation."

Quite important, indeed, on such things as the Overton-Russell amendment to conscript industry, which Mr. Roosevelt dodged in such a miserable manner.

Since giving these reminders, Willkie has looked over the record and has found no fewer than seventeen times this year in which Mr. Roosevelt advised Congress on pending legislation.

Why should Mr. Roosevelt indulge in such a misrepresentation, which can be discerned even by a school child? Simply because Willkie pushed him into a bad corner and the president, as in the case of other queries directed at him by his opponent, feared to attempt an answer. And the reason he fears to do this is because he does not stand upon firm ground.

Mr. Roosevelt may have made it a rule never to comment upon pending legislation; but, if he did so, the rule was repeatedly broken. Perhaps that is his explanation. Anyway, it is the only one the record can support.

Tall Lying by the Nazis Seems a Stupid Thing

THE UNITED STATES ARMY TRANSPORT AMERICAN LEGION arrived safe in New York after a voyage from Petsamo, Finland, through an area which the German high command said would be navigated at the peril of the skipper and the United States government.

It is true that this was part of the very area which had been forbidden to United States ships by the federal government itself and if anything had happened to the vessel, which had on board members of the Norwegian royal family and Mrs. Harriman, United States minister to Norway, a situation would have arisen which might have brought this nation close to war with Germany.

However that may be, the captain did a good job and said he saw no mines. He did say the German wireless was in constant touch with him throughout the voyage. It repeated warnings that mines were just ahead. He further revealed that the same German radio sent out a statement that the American Legion was running short of fuel and food and that the United States had sent ships to its rescue.

The fact was, said Captain Torning, that the American Legion had 10,000 pounds of food in the ice box on arrival at its destination and fuel enough to have gone to Petsamo and back again.

Almost nightly the British information service seeks to impress the outside world with the fact that its bulletins are absolutely accurate, particularly as to the great number of Nazi planes shot down in comparison with Royal Air Force losses. The reports sound convincing and it is certain that the British are far from demoralized.

Even the most impartial observer must be inclined to believe that the Nazis do some tall lying after reading the story sent out about the American Legion.

What is inexplicable is the fact that anyone would do a thing so stupid as to circulate reports which would so soon be shown up as false. Of course if the American Legion had gone down with all on board it might not have become known that the story of a shortage of food and fuel was pure invention, but there was a reasonable probability that the ship would reach port and the dumb deception of the German wireless be exposed.

But it must always be remembered that Hitler has plainly told the world that a lie can only be effective if it is big enough.

Something the Nazis Cannot Hope To Kill

NOBODY on this side of the Atlantic and few in England—except those, of course, who have seen with their own eyes and heard with their own ears—can guess the amount of havoc wrought in repeated Nazi air raids on London. There seems little doubt that both loss of life and destruction of property have been of considerable proportions. But this much is known: The British are fighting back with a ferocity which is intensified by every terroristic Nazi raid, a ferocity which augurs ill to invaders.

A few months ago there was a bombing raid on Paris—a city as rich in beauty and art, if no richer in history and tradition, than London. It was a fairly heavy raid. Factories in the outskirts were damaged; apartment houses and schools were struck. The world-famous landmarks of Paris escaped damage; but everyone—or almost everyone—said how terrible it would be if the architectural beauties of Paris were ruined by war.

A little later, when German armies were approaching Paris, the French government proclaimed the capital an "open city" in order to avoid bombardment by heavy artillery as well as from the air. So French soldiers were ordered to retreat, without firing a shot, from the city where their forefathers had fought from barricade to barricade.

Today Paris, its architectural beauties intact, is in German hands. If it remains in German hands long enough, Paris will become another Vienna—reduced to the position of a provincial outpost of Berlin.

These are not happy thoughts. The Arc de Triomphe still stands; but what will it mean if the Nazis, or their French hirelings, stay? The world would be sorry to see St. Paul's or Westminster, St. James's or Buckingham in ruins—but new cathedrals, new abbeys, new palaces would rise on their sites if the soul of the British people lived on.

The civilized world hopes that Nelson still will stand erect in Trafalgar square when this war ends. But Nelson, himself, would grimly order that every stone of his great monument be blown to dust rather than that England surrender ships or guns or men.

Front Line of Defense Farther Eastward

AVAILABILITY of Bermuda for an aviation and doubtless later for a naval base for the United States will throw the military outposts of this nation farther eastward than they have ever been before. Geographically Bermuda is considerably closer to the United States than it is to Britain. It is not a great distance from the middle Atlantic seaboard.

Bermuda can be fortified to guard against any direct approach from Europe to these continental shores. Should bases in Newfoundland and Nova Scotia later be offered by Britain and accepted, America for the first time would have a front line to defend to the eastward.

It is a matter of note that the Bermudians sought and received assurances from Britain that American bases there were not a first step toward cession of Bermuda to the United States. Britain's islands in the West Indies probably later will seek the same assurance and they will get it. Britain has no present intention of turning any territory permanently over to the United States.

Defense Hindered By the New Deal, Johnson Declares

Hugh Johnson

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—"With some severity, the president refused to make public the industrial mobilization plan that has been drafted since the World war . . . In answer to a question about the plan, the president asked why he should make it public any more than publishing the plan of the Civil war. 'We are working in 1940,' adding that he was not interested in any old plans." So the Washington Post reported this noteworthy presidential testiness.

The so-called mobilization plan is the result of years of work and study in the Army War college, the Army Industrial college and the general staff. It started with a long research for getting industry ready to equip armies and navies quickly, cheaply and efficiently. Its bases were both the successes and failures of our own industrial mobilization of 1917 and 1918. Countless hearings or studies were conducted to comb out all the errors of that effort.

Required by Law

Comparisons were made with similar experience in other countries. Since 1933, it has been increasingly plain that the startling Nazi success in rearmament was due to their adoption of our mobilization plan both in principle and detail. At frequent intervals, our plan has been revised to keep it abreast of all changes that could affect it.

This constant scientific work was not done in any eager volunteer brainstorming by ambitious army enthusiasts. It was done in compliance with a specific statuatory mandate of Congress, laid down in the law establishing the office and duties of the assistant secretary of war. It was again specifically revised in 1939 by a civilian board specifically appointed by the president to do so. It is in no sense an "old" plan. It is not only a firenew plan but it is the only plan there is.

A Miserable Failure

The present industrial mobilization in the sense of relative comparison with our own past experience or the present experience of other nations is a miserable failure—a complete flop. The reason for that is not that it follows in any "old" plan or any kind of "new" plan either—it just doesn't follow any plan at all. The mistakes of bewildered painless 1917 are being followed and repeated with nauseating regularity—and consequent hopeless delay. They are being repeated because the president and his administrative family were so fascinated with their habit of "brilliant experimentation" that they didn't want anything to interfere with it.

Above all, they didn't want to have any other influences in government, the president wanted to be exclusively the central figure in any war effort. The various spending agencies wanted to roll their own. The only outside aid they would suffer had to be completely without authority working in merely an advisory capacity. The statement has been made more than once that the New Deal has within itself all the talent and organization needed for any war effort.

Neglect Prompts Hysteria

The plain truth is that it has no such thing. Our defensive preparations ought to be going forward under inspiring leadership with great popular enthusiasm and perfect teamwork and unity among labor, industry and government. Industrial skill and experience and a well-formed plan are necessary for that. This administration scorns all these things.

Professing to have known the danger for years, it has neglected to prepare for it until it could only be done in an atmosphere of hysterical emergency. Now that the country has demanded action, it is unwilling to take action except in its invariable method of heedless, headlong, high-pressure stampede. —Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

THE GREAT HEALER

Question Raised by Ickes Recalls the Inflammatory Speeches by Roosevelt

By FRANKLYN WALTMAN

There was one question raised by Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes in his radio tirade replying to the Wendell Willkie acceptance speech which merits an answer.

"By what warrant," asked the New Deal's Donald Duck, "does Mr. Willkie presume to accuse the president of the United States of issuing inflammatory statements and indulging in manufactured panics?"

Donald Duck Ickes undoubtedly was not seeking knowledge. He must have been asking a rhetorical question for he surely must know the answers. For one of Mr. Roosevelt's "inflammtory" statements was uttered in Donald Duck's home town of Chicago and if we are not greatly mistaken Harold Ickes was not five feet away from Mr. Roosevelt at the time.

Quarantine Speech Recalled

The time was October 5, 1937 when Mr. Roosevelt shocked the country with his "quarantine speech." In essence Mr. Roosevelt on that occasion proposed that aggressor nations throughout the world be quarantined just as local health officers quarantine patients when an epidemic of physical disease breaks out. In other words, Mr. Roosevelt proposed that the United States take the lead in policing the world.

It was this speech which marked Mr. Roosevelt's sharp reversal from an attitude of peace and neutrality which he manifested during the 1936 campaign toward a course which ever since has made many, many Americans concerned lest he was leading the country into war.

There is no intention here to defend or excuse any aggressor nation. But it is not always so clear just who the aggressor is in many conflicts and, anyway, why should the United States assume the role of branding of nations as "aggressors" when their aggression is not aimed directly against us? And why should the United States assume the role of putting down aggressors wherever they may appear by undertaking to be the moral policeman of all the world?

Mr. Roosevelt's speech at Chicago three years ago raised these questions and visibly disturbed many Americans. Was it not therefore an "inflammtory" statement? And how about the president's other frequent speeches in which he assailed and belabored other governments? Were these not inflammatory?

Attack on Italians Cited

Of course, the most flagrant example of an "inflammatory" statement, however, was contained in the president's speech last June at the University of Virginia. In that speech Mr. Roosevelt delivered a slashing attack on the Italian government, actually naming it, and attributing to it an evil and shameful course.

What is worse, Mr. Roosevelt interpolated into that speech an intemperate statement unworthy of anyone who merits the description of statesman when he asserted that "on this tenth day of June the hand that held the dagger struck it into the back of its neighbor."

Seldom in modern history has the ruler of one nation uttered such "inflammatory" and provocative words regarding a friendly government as President Roosevelt did in this speech. In effect, he accused the Italian government of stealthily stabbing a neighbor in the back. Does anyone suppose the Italian people soon will forget that insult?

How about Submarines?

Now as for "manufactured panics," surely Mr. Ickes must remember all the submarine scares which President Roosevelt undertook to conjure up last September. It will be recalled that for a period of several weeks the White House every other day or so solemnly announced submarines off our coasts—mythical submarines that were not ever reported by any other quarter.

Likewise Mr. Ickes must remember the state of panic into which Mr. Roosevelt threw the country last fall when he summarily proclaimed a national emergency. For days none knew exactly what authority Mr. Roosevelt had appropriated to himself. Indeed, none knows with certitude even now. Yet we are at peace. But Mr. Roosevelt has acted as though the country were engaged in a war.

No, Donald Duck's quacking as usual was without foundation and Wendell Willkie stood on firm, very firm, ground when he asserted that "there have been occasions when many of us have wondered if he (the president) is deliberately inciting us to war."

Union Chief Is For Willkie

From the Indianapolis Star

Expressing the belief that Republican Nominee Wendell L. Willkie will be elected to the Presidency of the United States next November, William L. Hutcheson, international president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, in a statement yesterday pledged his support to Mr. Willkie's candidacy in the coming campaign.

Mr. Hutchenson was a delegate at large from Indiana to the national Republican convention at Philadelphia.

"Wendell L. Willkie's speech of acceptance at Elwood Saturday was a common sense document which should appeal to every American," Mr. Hutchenson said.

"Mr. Willkie revealed that he has a deep insight into the American way of life. While he did not go into detail regarding his position relative to labor, his remarks were sufficiently far-reaching to indicate that he is cognizant of labor's problems. After all, these problems are not far different from the problems of all other Americans.

"Labor will play an important part in this campaign. I do not believe, however, that this great group of American citizens should be regarded as a 'class.' There has been entirely too much effort already by the New Deal administration to divide the American people into 'classes.' The man or woman who belongs to a labor union is first of all an American citizen.

"I pledge my support to Mr. Willkie in this campaign and I believe that he will be elected our next President," the statement concluded.

From The Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

There are many reasons why the voters of the United States should elect Wendell L. Willkie to the presidentity. He is a strong man. His record is clean. He is honest and able. We are confident that he does not harbor any desire to be president of the United States in perpetuity. He has respect for the fine old virtues of work and square dealing. He believes, with the founders of the nation, that the presidential term should be limited to eight years, and that only an overwhelming ambition to assume the role of dictator could lead any man to flout the tradition that has guided our presidents for a century and a half.

There are an equal number of reasonus why the voters should defeat Franklin Delano Roosevelt. No previous president has flagrantly repudiated the constitution of the United States nor defied the third-term tradition as he has done. No previous president has demanded or received such broad powers in times of peace, and no precious president has so misused the powers conferred upon him. No previous president has frittered away the nation's assets and plunged the people so deeply in debt to such little purpose. No previous president has deliberately pronounced class hatreds for selfish political reasons. It is a record that calls for repudiation at the polls in November.

You Can't Fool The Bees

From the Christian Science Monitor

The bees are buzzing around the kitchen screen door and the open windows back in the home county just about now. It's preserving time. You can tell it a hundred yards away, if the wind's right. The bees probably get the scent for a mile, and if a tray of jelly glasses or preserves is set out in the sun to "jell" to cool, they will be all over the jars in a flash, avidly seeking a stray drop of syrup.

At this time it's probably peaches—White Heaths from the fine old trees near the house. One year Mother was away from home when the peaches came ripe and Father put them up himself. He has never done talking about it. Later there will be Elbertas and perhaps a few choice J. H. Hales, so big that you can't get more than four halves in a pint Mason jar.

Wild blackberries are ripe in the pasture lot now, and the whole family knows that there's nothing like blackberry jelly — especially wild blackberry jelly. Father always insisted that a few quarts be saved for blackberry cobbler. The children liked cobbler, all right, but they had their fun picking the berries—and eating as many as they picked.

Crabapple, grape, quince, currant—they'll all have their turn, and the choicest may be placed on the shelf alongside Aunt Emma's seeded cherries, to be entered in competition at the county fair. Aunt Emma removes the pits with a needle, so cunningly that the cherries look whole. She never tires of telling about the time that the judges passed her cherries by, thinking they were un-seeded. Thereafter she labeled them, and never failed to win the blue ribbon.

Wish w had some of that jelly on a slice of homemade bread right now. . .

Edwin C. Hill

If a hen-and-a-half lay an egg-and-a-half in a day-and-a-half, how long will it take one hen to lay a dozen eggs? It's getting so that a lad who can field a question like that has a better chance to succeed than one who knows something practical, or can do something useful.

In civil service examinations, in tests for fire and police departments, municipal, state and federal jobs, housing, relief and welfare work, the payroll aspiranta get a workout which might floor F. P. A. or John Kieran of "Information Please". Many of these questions have no remote or conceivable connection with anything involved in any prospective job. It's something like staging a track-meet to pick lawyers or award diplomas to the best pole-vaulters or high-hurdlers.

Question Mark Quarrel

Specifically, we note the case now in court in New York. Candidates for second-grade clerk in the municipal civil service had this to contend with:

"Doe's the following require a question mark at the end: 'May I help you with the problem of reorganization of the personnel'.

They flunked seventeen candidates who said the question mark was needed. The flunked ones brought suit, and opposing lawyers are now fanning up an argument which is already becoming metaphysical and may fill learned tomes before it's over, like the cob-web dissertations of the mediaeval scholastics. The judge had to postpone the hearing so that he could find time to bone up on authorities and precedents, if any. The examiners, I believe, have contended that you are just being polite if you state your intentions in the form of a question, and that the actual question mark is superfluous.

Law Bedeviled

The best judges and the best lawyers have been those who have heaved legal pedantry into the ash can and worked things out humanly and sensibly. The law has been bedeviled by a lot of abracadabra, but recently the perfectionist and precisionist have been busy in other fields to a degree which threatens to get us snarled up in subtleties until we can't turn a wheel.

I happen to know the details of a case in point. A middle-aged woman, a widow with family responsibilities, had worked seven years in the department of low-income housing inspection. She was more than ordinarily literate, had been schooled here and in Europe, spoke French, Italian and Russian, had been trained in social work and had maintained a record of the highest diligence and efficiency during the entire period.

In a shake-up in her department, in which it was proposed to raise the standards for employment, she and many of her skilled and experienced associates were subjected to an academic examination, in competition with a number of girls just out of college.

A Shade Better

This woman had something perhaps a shade better than a run-of-the-mill American college education, but she has been out of college for twenty years and had no means of knowing that they were going to ask her to state the binomial theorem, refine osmosis, and give the outline of the Treaty of Ghent. At any rate, she and many other women of proven skill, tact, efficiency and long experience were given the gate and in went the college girls in whose heads these hangnails of what is supposed to be education still lingered.

That housing department traded a lot of sound experience for a few educational knick-knacks having nothing to do with housing. This apart from the injustice of the women who had been faithful and competent on their job.

Unfair Strikes

These new tests are supposed to be as scientific as all get out. If it's scientific to pick somebody for a technical job because he knows the prepositions used with the ablative, I'm Albert Einstein. This business takes on more than ordinary importance now-a-days as more and more people are climbing onto government payrolls, without any sign of a let-down for a long time to come. Our country is boiling with young people of fine intelligence—and that means every-day working intelligence—and there is no reason why pedagogs and pedants should call strikes on them just because they miss trick questions.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Immunization Of Children Is Stressed

Every Child Has a Right for Health, Noted Physician Says

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I am sometimes chided for writing every year about this time in favor of diphtheria immunization for the child who is entering school for the first time. It is argued that in many cities such immunization is practically compulsory and that my arguments are pointless and unnecessary. But I do not desist because I think it is the highest duty that a column like this can obey to attempt to spread the gospel of immunization.

If I no longer have to try to persuade parents to undertake voluntarily the immunization of their children, as I had to fifteen years ago, at least I can advance the arguments which seem to me to make compulsory diphtheria vaccination necessary.

There is probably no single health conquest in the history of mankind that ranks with the elimination of diphtheria. Once among the deadliest and most contagious of diseases, it ravaged young people at the most promising period of their youth. Whole families of children—yea, even whole schoolrooms—were wiped out. It ran through whole neighborhoods, leaving death in its wake.

Rare Disease Now

Now barely twenty years after diphtheria immunization was made possible, it is a rare disease. In cities in the United States, whose combined population is over 38,000,000 people, barely one death per 100,000 population occurred in 1939. In thirty-two cities there were no deaths from diphtheria in 1939. In twenty cities in the United States there have been no diphtheria deaths in 1938 and '39.

This result is all the more remarkable because every person who becomes immune to diphtheria does so by making a voluntary individual effort. Diphtheria cannot be eliminated by broad hygienic methods such as are applicable to typhoid fever by purifying the water supply. The person who is rendered immune to diphtheria must be persuaded by the logic of the evidence—this is often the hardest part of the battle—and they must allow themselves to be examined and undergo a hypodermic injection.

The Schick Test

Selection of proper cases is accomplished by applying what is known as the Schick skin test. This consists in putting some diphtheria toxin in a small scratch in the skin. If at the end of twenty-four hours the skin around this scratch is red it means that the toxin has awakened a reaction in the chemical forces of the body and that the person will catch diphtheria if exposed. Immunization is done to susceptible people by using a form of diphtheria toxin that has become detoxicated. It is called toxoid.

The age at which this procedure should be carried out is during the young years when diphtheria is prevalent. Some authorities think that at the end of the first year is none too soon. All agree it should be done before the end of the second year.

Answer—(1) Undulant fever has occurred in a rather high proportion in packing house employees so apparently it may be acquired directly from raw flesh, but I know of no cases in which it has followed the ingestion of rare beef as rather small amounts of heat will destroy the germ. (2) Undoubtedly there are many people who have immunity to undulant fever. (3) It is not transmissible directly from human being to human being.

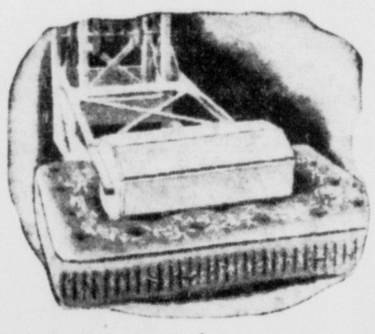
Do's & Don't's about Mattress Buying

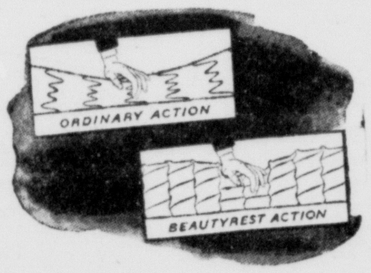
1. Don't Judge Comfort on Looks

Most mattresses LOOK comfortable in a store. But there are all kinds of comfort. A mattress made with indifferent "insides" can give you only indifferent comfort. The Beautyrest has a special construction that brings comfort to its most luxurious point.



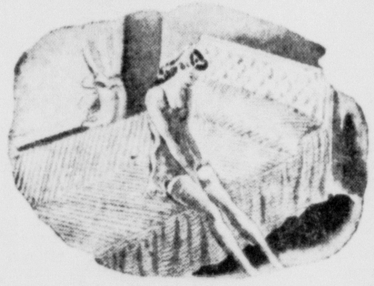
3. Don't Buy A Mattress That Can't Keep Its Comfort

A mattress that loses its comfort after a short while is no bargain. The United States Testing Company tested 17 different makes of mattresses. In these tests Beautyrest stood up 3 TIMES LONGER than any other mattress.



2. Don't Buy Until You Know About A Mattress's Insides

In the ordinary mattress, each spring is tied to the next by wire. When you press down on some springs, others nearby go down too . . . forming a slope. The Beautyrest has "independent coils." Each spring is pocketed . . . SEPARATED from the next . . . yields INDEPENDENTLY to the slightest movement.



4. Don't Buy A Mattress That Can't Keep Its Shape

Time is hard on a matress. After a few years lumps may form . . . edges may sag and get wavy. Beautyrest has a special PATENTED Sag-proof Edge. These edges stay erect and firm during the entire life of the mattress.

'Dear Diary' Tells All

AUBURN, Calif., (AP) — Twenty-two miles of trail over the high Sierras, used by emigrant trains of the gold rush days, has been marked with signs. Since most of the route is obscured by forest, diaries and other records owned by pioneer families were used for guides.

THE "WILLKIE" BOB

Women find ideas for new coiffures everywhere. This one, worn by Judy Thornton, New York model, was inspired by Wendell Willkie, the Republican standard bearer. The "Willkie Bob," as it is called, features a lock of hair dangling over the right eye.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kalbaugh, Westernport, were united in marriage at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon at St. Peter's Catholic church, Westernport.

The bride was gowned in a zephr cream colored gown in sofonic taffeta, topped by a gold embellished jacket. She wore a finger-tip illusion veil of cream color which fell from an orange blossom cornet.

Following a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Kalbaugh will reside at 308 Front street, Westernport.

Church Wedding

The marriage of Miss Loraine Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Wilson, Rivesville, W. Va., and Fred Sanford Straight, son of the late Mrs. Effie G. Straight, Fairmont, W. Va., took place at noon Sunday in Trinity Lutheran church by the Rev. William von Spreckelsen.

The bride wore soldier blue crepe with a corsage of baby-pink rosebuds.

E. C. Wilson, Jr., brother of the bride, and Miss Flora Straight, sister of the bridegroom, were the attendants.

Mrs. Straight attended Fairmont State Teachers college, where she was a member of the Alpha Kappa Chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. She was a student this past year at the Fairmont Business college and has been employed by the Consolidated Coal company.

Mr. Straight is a graduate of the College of Pharmacy at West Virginia university and is associated with the Lichtenstein Drug company.

Mr. and Mrs. Straight left for the Eastern Shore and New York and upon their return will reside at Altamont terrace.

BEFORE THE BLITZKRIEG

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

by RUPERT GRAYSON

READ THIS FIRST:

Returning from a nerve-wracking assignment, Gun Cotton, famous Scotland Yard agent, goes to Sleichtner's Egyptian Ray-Baths, where he becomes interested in a mysterious stranger named Pullinger, who is wearing a tattooed Egyptian symbol. Pullinger is met by a beautiful flame-haired girl at the swimming pool in the baths. Gun calls another agent, Coffin Prescott, to trail Pullinger. The agent sees Pullinger again meet a flame-haired girl and trails the pair, but loses them.

Gun held the door open for the attractive stranger.

CHAPTER TEN

X WAS looking thoughtful, and drummed on the desk with his finger tips as he spoke.

"Excellent!" he remarked. "Very good, indeed! And what nationality would you say this man is?"

Gun considered.

"No accent," he replied at last. "Speaks English with great care, as foreigners sometimes do, tall and dark, and looks to me like a Spaniard." He added, thoughtfully: "I'll swear he's a Latin."

"And where did you tell Prescott to report to?" said X, with a certain grimness.

"Here."

"We'll be hearing something sooner or later, then. Prescott is unrivaled as a real, dyed-in-the-wool sleuth. Your friend, Pullinger, as he chooses to call himself, won't dodge HIM!"

"I'll bet he won't," laughed Gun.

The telephone buzzed, and X picked up the receiver.

"Right," he said. "Yes, he's here." He passed the instrument to Gun. "The call's for you, Gun!"

"That'll be Prescott," said Gun, with anticipation. He spoke into the telephone. "Hullo! Cotton speaking. That you, Prescott? Good—well?" . . . As he listened his face changed. "What . . .?" Poor, ridiculous Prescott. . . . "Yes . . . Well, what happened before?" He listened for a few moments and then said curtly: "Right you are. Ring again if you've any luck!" And hung up the receiver.

He looked across the desk at X with a rueful smile on his face.

"We spoke a bit too soon. Prescott's lost his man, in the silliest way in the world, and entirely through his own fault!"

"The devil he has!" exclaimed X, with annoyance. "What happened, anyway?"

"He tells me that, after leaving me, he followed this fellow Pullinger to Soho, where the man met a girl in a pub, apparently by appointment. Prescott says she was a smart girl—well dressed, a good looker, and seemed to be a lady. He thinks she might be an actress. They left the pub together, and took a taxi to Brixton. Walked up a side street, and went into a monumental mason's. Remained there 20 minutes, and then came out again. Walked back to the Brixton road, and stopped to look in a shop window. Partly because he wanted some, and partly so that they shouldn't notice him and suspect that he was dogging them, Prescott slipped into a tobacconist's to get some cigarets. Says he was only in there two minutes at the outside, but when he came out they'd completely disappeared!"

"Well, I'm damned!" said X, with some force. "They must have picked up a taxi."

"Prescott says no. A straight stretch of road, and not a taxi in sight! But he thinks they may have gone into some house in the High road. He's hanging about indefinitely on the off-chance of picking them up again."

X smiled faintly.

"He'll be furious about it. He takes particular pride in his abilities, and to be caught out like that won't please him at all. He'll stop there all night on the off-chance of picking up his man again. Poor old Coffin!"

"Oh, well, I don't think it'll be difficult to pick him up. If he's no passport, he'll be putting up again at the Turkish Baths—where he doesn't have to register."

There was silence for a moment, then Gun asked abruptly:

"What's it all about, anyway?"

But X was famous for not letting any of his people know too much about anything—it was one of their stock complaints. And now he stalled.

"I hardly know enough myself to tell you anything," he said. "But I have my suspicions. This man of yours isn't the only one on the game, whatever it is. But I don't mind telling you this much—it is this job that Cazleton is on at the moment. He's down at a little place on the Essex coast—a place called Chenham—having a look around. And, incidentally, not having heard from him for a couple of days, I'm feeling a little anxious. It is just possible I might want you to run down there yourself, as you seem to have got in on the job, so just hold yourself in readiness, will you?"

"Right you are!" answered Gun, obediently. "You know where to find me if you want me in a hurry."

He took a gesture of dismissal from X, and went out.

As he walked along Whitehall, Gun reflected that the name of Chenham stirred some memory, but he could not for the life of him think what.

Then he remembered—a man he knew at the club, a fellow named Watson, "something important in the city," had mentioned that he had a little place down there where he got some excellent duck shooting.

And memory of that recalled the fact that, some time before, he had agreed to go around to Watson's house in Grosvenor place one night for a quiet game of snooker.

For no particular reason, except that he had visions of a dull evening before him, Gun rang up Watson and suggested that he would be free that evening, and the suggestion resulted in a cordial invitation to dinner, which Gun refused, and afterward had cause to wish he hadn't. He had an idea that he might hear something from Prescott, and wanted to remain at home as long as possible. He said, however, that he would drop in for a game of snooker at about ten, and so it was left.

There came neither sign nor sound from Prescott, however, and at about nine forty-five Gun left the flat, chartered a taxi and drove to Grosvenor place.

The taxi set him down outside Watson's house, and Gun handed the driver a ten-shilling note.

"Sorry, sir—no change, I'm afraid!"

"Trouble with you fellows," commented Gun, "is that you're like the eternal mountains — always changeless!"

He was searching his pockets for odd coins, when with almost startling suddenness a voice behind him said:

"Oh—can I have your taxi—if you've done with it?"

It was a very pleasant voice, and Gun turned to find a face quite as pleasing smiling into his own. He had a vision of flame-colored hair, blue eyes and small, very white teeth. She was in evening dress, and the perfume she used was faint but subtly intriguing.

"I bequeath him to you freely, lock, stock and barrel," he said. "Or, rather, wheel, body and bonnet." He handed the man a florin and a sixpence.

He held the door open for her.

"May I tell him where to go?"

As she stepped in he noted the neat ankles and feet with approval.

"The Five Arts club, Bloomsbury square, please."

Gun passed on the direction, wondering a little. He knew the Five Arts club—a residential club for girls and women associated with artistic work, and without much money.

Then it suddenly occurred to him that she must have come out of his friend's house. There had been no one in sight when he got out of the taxi, and he would almost certainly have noticed her if she had come out of any of the houses to left or right of him, whereas he had had his back turned to Watson's front door. Perhaps she had been dining with him? That was the first time Gun regretted he had not accepted that dinner invitation. Her voice, he remembered, had been cool and clear as crystal, with that slight stressing of the "r's." She was probably an actress—that would account for the Five Arts club.

Why Good Grooming requires keeping DARK ARCS DRY

If you still are tolerating perspiration under the arms, just listen to facts about hygiene in these dark arcs that any doctor can give you:

It's uncleanly! That repellant underarm odor signals decay! That perspiration which damages gowns is decomposed!

Because the dark arcs are closed to purifying air and light, perspiration decays before it evaporates.

Perspiration, carrying cast off body wastes, pours out on the skin, mingling with dead skin scales, and microorganisms. Decay begins. Acids form. Fungus may grow and bacteria multiply. Rancid odors appear.

"It's shocking," say lovely women of today!

They prevent it, by using Arrid to safely check perspiration. Arrid keeps underarms dry, odorless, 1 to 3 days. No perspiration, no decay, no odor.

Arrid, which safely checks perspiration, is a pure, white, greaseless cream. Harmless to skin and fabrics. Use it any time, after shaving, as you dress . . . 10¢, 39¢, 59¢—at stores which sell toilet goods.

More than 25 MILLION jars of Arrid have been sold.

Church Wedding

The marriage of Miss Loraine Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Wilson, Rivesville, W. Va., and Fred Sanford Straight, son of the late Mrs. Effie G. Straight, Fairmont, W. Va., took place at noon Sunday in Trinity Lutheran church by the Rev. William von Spreckelsen.

The bride wore soldier blue crepe with a corsage of baby-pink rosebuds.

E. C. Wilson, Jr., brother of the bride, and Miss Flora Straight, sister of the bridegroom, were the attendants.

Mrs. Straight attended Fairmont State Teachers college, where she was a member of the Alpha Kappa Chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. She was a student this past year at the Fairmont Business college and has been employed by the Consolidated Coal company.

Mr. Straight is a graduate of the College of Pharmacy at West Virginia university and is associated with the Lichtenstein Drug company.

Mr. and Mrs. Straight left for the Eastern Shore and New York and upon their return will reside at Altamont terrace.

Events in Brief

Nearly seventy-five persons attended the ninth annual Deffinbaugh reunion held Sunday at Davis's grove, near Flintstone. A chart of the family tree was prepared by Miss Alma Logsdon, Frostburg. Tribute was paid to Marshall Deffinbaugh, Covington, Va., who died since last year's reunion.

The Ever Faithful Bible Class of the Evangelical church, Third street, will meet at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Pauline Fisher, Maple street.

The Baltimore and Ohio Veterans will meet at 7:30 o'clock this evening in the Baltimore and Ohio Y.M.C.A.

The Knights of Malta will hold a public five hundred card party at 8:15 o'clock this evening in the temple, 67 Prospect square.

The Youngblood reunion will be held Sunday at Camp Morgan, near Berkeley Springs, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cole, 115 North Cedar street, have just returned from Washington and Baltimore.

Miss Ida Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kalbaugh, Westernport, were united in marriage at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon at St. Peter's Catholic church, Westernport.

The bride was gowned in a zephr cream colored gown in sofonic taffeta, topped by a gold embellished jacket. She wore a finger-tip illusion veil of cream color which fell from an orange blossom cornet.

Following a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Kalbaugh will reside at 308 Front street, Westernport.

THE "WILLKIE" BOB

VIVIEN LEIGH AND OLIVIER WED

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Olivier

Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, pictured above, noted British film and stage players, are married in a ceremony at the ranch home of friends near Santa Barbara, Cal. They were accompanied by Katharine Hepburn, screen actress, and Garson Kanin, motion picture director.

'Dear Diary' Tells All

AUBURN, Calif., (AP) — Twenty-two miles of trail over the high Sierras, used by emigrant trains of the gold rush days, has been marked with signs. Since most of the route is obscured by forest, diaries and other records owned by pioneer families were used for guides.

BEFORE THE BLITZKRIEG

by RUPERT GRAYSON

READ THIS FIRST:

Returning from a nerve-wracking assignment, Gun Cotton, famous Scotland Yard agent, goes to Sleichtner's Egyptian Ray-Baths, where he becomes interested in a mysterious stranger named Pullinger, who is wearing a tattooed Egyptian symbol. Pullinger is met by a beautiful flame-haired girl at the swimming pool in the baths. Gun calls another agent, Coffin Prescott, to trail Pullinger. The agent sees Pullinger again meet a flame-haired girl and trails the pair, but loses them.

CHAPTER TEN

X WAS looking thoughtful, and drummed on the desk with his finger tips as he spoke.

"Excellent!" he remarked. "Very good, indeed! And what nationality would you say this man is?"

Gun considered.

"No accent," he replied at last. "Speaks English with great care, as foreigners sometimes do, tall and dark, and looks to me like a Spaniard." He added, thoughtfully: "I'll swear he's a Latin."

"And where did you tell Prescott to report to?" said X, with a certain grimness.

"Here."

"We'll be hearing something sooner or later, then. Prescott is unrivaled as a real, dyed-in-the-wool sleuth. Your friend, Pullinger, as he chooses to call himself, won't dodge HIM!"

"I'll bet he won't," laughed Gun.

The telephone buzzed, and X picked up the receiver.

"Right," he said. "Yes, he's here." He passed the instrument to Gun. "The call's for you, Gun!"

"That'll be Prescott," said Gun, with anticipation. He spoke into the telephone. "Hullo! Cotton speaking. That you, Prescott? Good—well?" . . . As he listened his face changed. "What . . . ?" Poor, ridiculous Prescott. . . . "Yes . . . Well, what happened before?" He listened for a few moments and then said curtly: "Right you are. Ring again if you've any luck!" And hung up the receiver.

He looked across the desk at X with a rueful smile on his face.

"We spoke a bit too soon. Prescott's lost his man, in the silliest way in the world, and entirely through his own fault!"

"The devil he has!" exclaimed X, with annoyance. "What happened, anyway?"

"He tells me that, after leaving me, he followed this fellow Pullinger to Soho, where the man met a girl in a pub, apparently by appointment. Prescott says she was a smart girl—well dressed, a good looker, and seemed to be a lady. He thinks she might be an actress. They left the pub together, and took a taxi to Brixton. Walked up a side street, and went into a monumental mason's. Remained there 20 minutes, and then came out again. Walked back to the Brixton road, and stopped to look in a shop window. Partly because he wanted some, and partly so that they shouldn't notice him and suspect that he was dogging them, Prescott slipped into a tobacconist's to get some cigarets. Says he was only in there two minutes at the outside, but when he came out they'd completely disappeared!"

"Well, I'm damned!" said X, with some force. "They must have picked up a taxi."

"Prescott says no. A straight stretch of road, and not a taxi in sight! But he thinks they may have gone into some house in the High road. He's hanging about indefinitely on the off-chance of picking them up again."

X smiled faintly.

"He'll be furious about it. He takes particular pride in his abilities, and to be caught out like that won't please him at all. He'll stop there all night on the off-chance of picking up his man again. Poor old Coffin!"

"Oh, well, I don't think it'll be difficult to pick him up. If he's no passport, he'll be putting up again at the Turkish Baths—where he doesn't have to register."

There was silence for a moment, then Gun asked abruptly:

"What's it all about, anyway?"

But X was famous for not letting any of his people know too much about anything—it was one of their stock complaints. And now he stalled.

"I hardly know enough myself to tell you anything," he said. "But I have my suspicions. This man of yours isn't the only one on the game, whatever it is. But I don't mind telling you this much—it is this job that Cazleton is on at the moment. He's down at a little place on the Essex coast—a place called Chenham—having a look around. And, incidentally, not having heard from him for a couple of days, I'm feeling a little anxious. It is just possible I might want you to run down there yourself, as you seem to have got in on the job, so just hold yourself in readiness, will you?"

"Right you are!" answered Gun, obediently. "You know where to find me if you want me in a hurry."

He took a gesture of dismissal from X, and went out.

As he walked along Whitehall, Gun reflected that the name of Chenham stirred some memory, but he could not for the life of him think what.

Then he remembered—a man he knew at the club, a fellow named Watson, "something important in the city," had mentioned that he had a little place down there where he got some excellent duck shooting.

And memory of that recalled the fact that, some time before, he had agreed to go around to Watson's house in Grosvenor place one night for a quiet game of snooker.

For no particular reason, except that he had visions of a dull evening before him, Gun rang up Watson and suggested that he would be free that evening, and the suggestion resulted in a cordial invitation to dinner, which Gun refused, and afterward had cause to wish he hadn't. He had an idea that he might hear something from Prescott, and wanted to remain at home as long as possible. He said, however, that he would drop in for a game of snooker at about ten, and so it was left.

There came neither sign nor sound from Prescott, however, and at about nine forty-five Gun left the flat, chartered a taxi and drove to Grosvenor place.

The taxi set him down outside Watson's house, and Gun handed the driver a ten-shilling note.

"Sorry, sir—no change, I'm afraid!"

"Trouble with you fellows," commented Gun, "is that you're like the eternal mountains — always changeless!"

He was searching his pockets for odd coins, when with almost startling suddenness a voice behind him said:

"Oh—can I have your taxi—if you've done with it?"

It was a very pleasant voice, and Gun turned to find a face quite as pleasing smiling into his own. He had a vision of flame-colored hair, blue eyes and small, very white teeth. She was in evening dress, and the perfume she used was faint but subtly intriguing.

"I bequeath him to you freely, lock, stock and barrel," he said. "Or, rather, wheel, body and bonnet." He handed the man a florin and a sixpence.

He held the door open for her.

"May I tell him where to go?"

As she stepped in he noted the neat ankles and feet with approval.

"The Five Arts club, Bloomsbury square, please."

Gun passed on the direction, wondering a little. He knew the Five Arts club—a residential club for girls and women associated with artistic work, and without much money.

Then it suddenly occurred to him that she must have come out of his friend's house. There had been no one in sight when he got out of the taxi, and he would almost certainly have noticed her if she had come out of any of the houses to left or right of him, whereas he had had his back turned to Watson's front door. Perhaps she had been dining with him? That was the first time Gun regretted he had not accepted that dinner invitation. Her voice, he remembered, had been cool and clear as crystal, with that slight stressing of the "r's." She was probably an actress—that would account for the Five Arts club.

Why Good Grooming requires keeping DARK ARCS DRY

If you still are tolerating perspiration under the arms, just listen to facts about hygiene in these dark arcs that any doctor can give you:

It's uncleanly! That repellant underarm odor signals decay! That perspiration which damages gowns is decomposed!

Because the dark arcs are closed to purifying air and light, perspiration decays before it evaporates.

Perspiration, carrying cast off body wastes, pours out on the skin, mingling with dead skin scales, and microorganisms. Decay begins. Acids form. Fungus may grow and bacteria multiply. Rancid odors appear.

"It's shocking," say lovely women of today!

They prevent it, by using Arrid to safely check perspiration. Arrid keeps underarms dry, odorless, 1 to 3 days. No perspiration, no decay, no odor.

Arrid, which safely checks perspiration, is a pure, white, greaseless cream. Harmless to skin and fabrics. Use it any time, after shaving, as you dress . . . 10¢, 39¢, 59¢—at stores which sell toilet goods.

More than 25 MILLION jars of Arrid have been sold.

Cumberland Swimmers Get Second Place as Result of Recount

Changes in the final standing of teams in the first annual Queen City Swimming and Diving meet, Sunday at Constitution Park pool, announced yesterday by William H. Buchholtz, director, move the Cumberland Aquatic Club from sixth place to the runner-up position with a total of 35 points instead of 21 tallies.

Buchholtz said that the change was made after it was discovered that there was a miscalculation in points scored for diving.

The Washington (D. C.) Golf and Country Club, winner of the team award, a trophy donated by the Cumberland Police Boys' Club, retained first place in the recount with 46 points instead of 43 as originally announced. Third place went to the Baltimore Y. M. H. A. with 30 points, the Shoreham A. C., of Washington, was fourth with 28 points, followed by the Baltimore K. of C., 25 and Washington Airport 17.

B. & O. Reports Increase In Car Loadings

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad handled 236,830 cars of freight during the month of August, 1940. Of this total 153,723 were loaded on line and 83,107 were received from connections. This was an increase of 30,625 cars over August, last year, when the total was 206,205, consisting of 134,758 cars loaded on line and 71,447 received from connections.

It was also an increase of 14,362 cars over July, 1940, when 222,468 carloads were handled, comprising 143,214 loaded on line and 79,274 received from connections.

For the month of August, 1930, the total was 288,997, embracing 189,049 cars loaded on line and 99,948 received from connections.

For the week ended August 31, the B. & O. handled 53,162 cars of freight. Of this total 34,932 were loaded on line and 18,230 received from connections. This was an increase of 4,986 over the corresponding week of last year, when 48,176 carloads were handlued, comprising 31,572 loaded on line and 16,604 received from connections.

The preceding week of this year (the week ended August 24) 53,305 carloads were hauled, consisting of 35,031 cars loaded on line and 18,274 received from connections. For the corresponding week in the year 1930, the total was 59,530, including 38,454 loaded on line and 21,076 received from connections.

Parking on East Side Of Virginia Avenue Is Prohibited

Approval of the recommendation of Commissioner James Orr that Virginia avenue remain a two-way street with parking prohibited on the east side, was given yesterday at the regular meeting of the mayor and city council.

The council authorized the city engineer and street commissioner to prepare an estimate for improving Patterson avenue and Springfield Boulevard following a request by Clarence R. Jones, 765 Springfield boulevard, that something be done to improve the streets.

City Tax Collector James M. Conway reported collections of $63,745.20 for the month of August while City Clerk Samuel Griminger's report for the month showed license fees received totaling $2,179 and movie tax receipts $701.55.

The police and fire commissioners report showed 310 arrests and $479 collected in fines. Eighteen fires were reported last month.

Permission to hold a street bazaar October 1 to 4, was given to the Metropolitan A. M. E. church.

Receipts at Constitution Park pool for August totaled $1,235.55.

ter he was stricken on the street several blocks from his home.

Mr. Sullivan, a retired coal miner, had started to the grocery store when he collapsed. A stomach ulcer burst, according to a physician who was summoned.

Mr Sullivan was born at nearby Franklin a son of Michael J. Sullivan, of Akron, and the late Mary Morgan Sullivan. He had lived his entire life in this area. He was a member of St. Peter's Catholic.

Surviving besides his 93-year-old father, are six daughters, Hilda, Helen and Genevieve Sullivan, at home; Mrs. Fred Frenzel, Barton, Mrs. Lloyd Wildeman, Shaw, W. Va.; and Mrs. Edward Whitfield, Westernport; three sons, Lawrence Sullivan, at home; Paul Sullivan, Keyser, W. Va.; and Russell Sullivan, Akron, Ohio; two sisters; Mrs. Genevieve Sullivan, Akron, and Mrs. Harry McKittrick, Modesta, Calif.; and a brother, John Sullivan, of Akron.

Mr. Sullivan's wife, the former Elizabeth Guy, died in January, 1939.

Four Building Permits Totaling $18,465 Are Issued by Engineer

Four building permits, two for dwelling, one for a service station and one for a garage, totaling $18,465, were issued by City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, will build a service station, 26 by 54 feet, at the corner of Greene and Fayette street, to replace the present building, at a cost of $7,000.

S. J. Nightengale obtained a permit for the building of a two story brick house on Shriver avenue. The cost is estimated at $5,800. A. L. Will is contractor and George Sansbury furnished the plans.

John Howe, former superintendent of the local B. & O. shops, will have built a one and a half story house at 25 Louisiana avenue at a cost of $5,500. A. L. Will is contractor.

Mrs. Eva Riehl received a permit to build a metal garage costing $165 on the rear of 622 Maryland avenue facing Baker street. Miller and Hamilton are the contractors.

Va.; and Mrs. Edward Whitfield, Westernport; three sons, Lawrence Sullivan, at home; Paul Sullivan, Keyser, W. Va.; and Russell Sullivan, Akron, Ohio; two sisters; Mrs. Genevieve Sullivan, Akron, and Mrs. Harry McKittrick, Modesta, Calif.; and a brother, John Sullivan, of Akron.

Mr. Sullivan's wife, the former Elizabeth Guy, died in January, 1939.

Four Building Permits Totaling $18,465 Are Issued by Engineer

Four building permits, two for dwelling, one for a service station and one for a garage, totaling $18,465, were issued by City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, will build a service station, 26 by 54 feet, at the corner of Greene and Fayette street, to replace the present building, at a cost of $7,000.

S. J. Nightengale obtained a permit for the building of a two story brick house on Shriver avenue. The cost is estimated at $5,800. A. L. Will is contractor and George Sansbury furnished the plans.

John Howe, former superintendent of the local B. & O. shops, will have built a one and a half story house at 25 Louisiana avenue at a cost of $5,500. A. L. Will is contractor.

Mrs. Eva Riehl received a permit to build a metal garage costing $165 on the rear of 622 Maryland avenue facing Baker street. Miller and Hamilton are the contractors.

MOTHER AT 13

Thirteen-year-old Refugio Perez Hernandez is shown with her six-pound baby, born in a Martinez, Calif., hospital. The girl eloped to Neno, Nev., with 20-year-old Isabel Hernandez last January.

Two Divorce Petitions Docketed in Circuit Court

Two divorce petitions were docketed in Circuit Court yesterday by Attorney Elmer B. Gower.

Mildred Louise Athey filed suit against Ivern Athey, a Celanese employee, charging that he has failed to provide a home for her since August, 1939. Roy Clyde Douty filed suit against Bennette Douty asking for a divorce matrimonii decree.

Forcing Child To Eat Is Not Proper Method

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

I do sometimes wish that some pediatricians could read about 1000 typical letters I receive on problems mothers face to get their babies to eat. Then more of these pediatricians would become interested in the psychology of appetite and would realize they don't do enough when they tell the mother what to feed the child and how much; that they also need to show this mother how to cultivate an appetite in the child for this food, how to lead the child to want to eat it. Then fewer doctors would give such advice as the mother in the letter below says was given her.

Forcing Food on Child

"Dear Dr. Myers: I am at my wit's end as to what to do about getting my baby to eat. She is eleven months old. . . . The doctor told me to force her to eat. When I did she became ill; he said not to pay any attention to her sickness, just to go ahead feeding her. This morning I did just that, and when it was time for her to eat lunch she refused. She didn't become ill, but she wouldn't swallow the spinach or beets. She would push them out of her mouth just as fast as I would put them in. And she was crying and getting upset and so was I. I just had to stop feeding her because I was almost hysterical."

Although it is true that a very slight amount of resistance to a new food might be overcome by pushing a tiny bit of it into the baby's mouth, by gradual adaptation; yet if this child's resistance increases instead of diminishing this food grows more repellant and the child's resistance to all food may increase.

Don't Worry About Weight

The trouble is the mother expects the baby to eat what she offers and all of it right away. She is told what he should have and how much. Then if the child doesn't chose to eat it she proceeds to force it into him. Moreover, her unhappy emotions increase all the while and in turn increase the child's resistance and decrease his appetite. If she is to succeed she will not bother about how [illegible] the child eats today nor about his weight now. She will think only in terms of cultivating gradually his appetite so he will be eating well and weigh enough a month or two hence.

The AMERICAN WAY COOKING SCHOOL

Brought by the

CUMBERLAND TIMES & NEWS

I'm Bringing you Heirloom Recipes of the Past and for the Future

For the American Way Cooking School our famous lecturer has sought out choice recipes treasured by old families in the North, South, East, West! From all those "heirloom recipes" gathered from every part of America, she has chosen the very best ones to prepare for you at this cooking school. What a treasure for every woman who attends! In addition to those old American recipes, the lecturer will present new ones she has developed in her own kitchen—new, modern ideas which take fitting place with the old ones, and which will become heirloom recipes of the future! Meat dishes of every kind, cakes, pies, salads, cookies and desserts are to be included. Our expert stresses that each recipe is a practical dish which calls for no rare and unusual ingredients, only those products which are found on the average kitchen shelf. The American Way Cooking School is an event which will mean much to the women of this city! Observe the dates! Plan now to attend every session!

Gridiron Battle Of All-Stars Is Booked on Radio

Contest between Eastern Collegians and Giants Will Be Described

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 3—Mutual brings another All-Star football game to the loudspeaker Wednesday night. This time it's the Eastern College All-Stars vs. The New York Giants.

Dick Fishell will carry on the running account, and Marty Glickman will talk up the color. The broadcast is set for 8:30 to 10 p. m.

Lawson Zerbe, veteran character acter, has just taken on another role—making him play nine different characters in nine different shows. His latest is the part of a doctor in CBS' Aunt Jenny's True Life Stories. He averages 20 fifteen-minute shows a week.

Get Own Spot

Quiz Kids, who went in originally as a vacation stop-gap, get a spot of their own on WJZ-NBC beginning tomorrow night at 7 p. m. The program, featuring youngsters between 5 and 15, originates in Chicago.

Otto Preminger, European and American theatrical director and now head of play production at Yale, talks on "The Modern Theater" on CBS' Lecture Hall at 3 p. m. He directed "Margin for Error," last year's Broadway hit.

Many Sound Effects

Manhattan at Midnight, WJZ-NBC's newest series, will use eighty-six sound effects, manipulated by a record crew of five technicians, on tomorrow night's show, at 7:30.

"The Foundation Stone of Republican Government," a speech delivered in New Orleans in 1845 by Judah P. Benjamin, then one of the nation's foremost lawyers, will be reenacted on WJZ-NBC at 1:15 on the Echoes of History series.

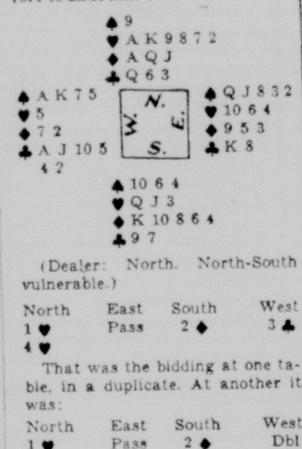
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

SHOWING TWO SUITS

THERE ARE times when you can show two suits with a single call. A double after the opponents have shown two suits must obviously tell your partner you are prepared for a takeout by him in either of the two unbid ones. There are many situations in which this is more desirable than bidding one of your own suits, as it practically tells the whole story all at once. Your partner then can be ready to act even if the next opponent jumps in an effort to shut him out.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♦	3 ♣

That was the bidding at one table, in a duplicate. At another it was:

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♦	Dbl
4 ♥		4 ♠

In the first case, East could not be at all sure that his partner held anything particular in spades, or that his hand was very strong. In the second case, West told the wide world that he held a strong hand, including enough fit for a four-card suit in either of the black suits, since the enemy had bid the two red ones.

Game can be made by either side on this deal. North and South will lose only one trick in spades and two in clubs, when playing for 4-Hearts. East and West will lose only one trick in hearts and two in diamonds when playing for 4-Spades. In such a situation, the hand really should be played at a sacrifice, which gets beaten. If North and South could have been sure their opponents would make game, their bid over 4-Spades would have been 5-Hearts, beaten one trick, but they had no sure way of knowing it. In fact, both partners studied a bit before deciding not to double the 4-Spades.

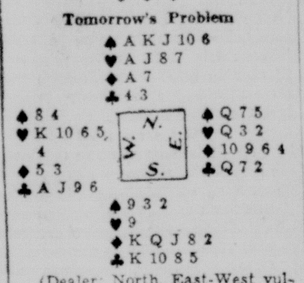
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

Why should correct bidding here put North and South into 4-Spades and not 3-No Trumps?

Homemakers Clubs To Hold Meetings

WESTMINSTER, Md., Sept. 2. (AP) —Plans for the sixth annual tri-county meeting of homemakers clubs from Washington, Frederick and Carroll counties to be held Sept. 18 have been announced.

Mrs. John D. Young, president of the Carroll county council, will preside at the meeting, at Western Maryland college.

Miss Loda Mae Davis of the advisory commission to the Council of National Defense, will be the principal speaker. She will discuss "homemakers' interests in the changing economic and social conditions of the United States."

Miss Venia M. Kellar, assistant director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, will discuss her recent travels in Canada.

A musical feature will be the first appearance of the Carroll County Homemakers Club Chorus.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

SHOWING TWO SUITS

THERE ARE times when you can show two suits with a single call. A double after the opponents have shown two suits must obviously tell your partner you are prepared for a takeout by him in either of the two unbid ones. There are many situations in which this is more desirable than bidding one of your own suits, as it practically tells the whole story all at once. Your partner then can be ready to act even if the next opponent jumps in an effort to shut him out.

	♠ 9 ♥ A K 9 8 7 2 ♦ A Q J ♣ Q 6 3
♠ A K 7 5 ♥ 5 ♦ 7 2 ♣ A J 10 5 4 2	W. N. E. S.	♠ Q J 8 3 2 ♥ 10 6 4 ♦ 9 5 3 ♣ K 8
	♠ 10 6 4 ♥ Q J 3 ♦ K 10 8 6 4 ♣ 9 7

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West

That was the bidding at one table, in a duplicate. At another it was:

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♠	Dbl
4 ♥	4 ♠

In the first case, East could not be at all sure that his partner held anything particular in spades, or that his hand was very strong. In the second case, West told the wide world that he held a strong hand, including enough fit for a four-card suit in either of the black suits, since the enemy had bid the two red ones.

Game can be made by either side on this deal. North and South will lose only one trick in spades and two in clubs, when playing for 4-Hearts. East and West will lose only one trick in hearts and two in diamonds when playing for 4-Spades. In such a situation, the hand really should be played at a sacrifice, which gets beaten. If North and South could have been sure their opponents would make game, their bid over 4-Spades would have been 5-Hearts, beaten one trick, but they had no sure way of knowing it. In fact, both partners studied a bit before deciding not to double the 4-Spades.

Tomorrow's Problem

	♠ A K J 10 6 ♥ A J 8 7 ♦ A 7 ♣ 4 3
♠ 8 4 ♥ K 10 6 5 4 ♦ 5 3 ♣ A J 9 6	W. N. E. S.	♠ Q 7 5 ♥ Q 3 2 ♦ 10 9 6 4 ♣ Q 7 2
	♠ 9 3 2 ♥ 9 ♦ K Q J 8 2 ♣ K 10 8 5

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

Why should correct bidding here put North and South into 4-Spades and not 3-No Trumps?

Frostburg Audit Goes to Scott By 3 to 2 Vote

Skidmore and Lemmert Oppose Naming of Former County Auditor

FROSTBURG, Sept. 3—By a vote of three to two, the mayor and city commissioners tonight awarded the contract for the audit of the city's books to William Scott, of Cumberland, former county auditor.

The contract calls for audit of the books for a one-year period at a cost of $150. Scott also submitted bids of $300 for a two-year audit and $450 for a three-year audit.

Only other bidder was Charles O. Hall, a Certified Public Accountant, of Baltimore, whose bids were $400 for one year; $600, two years; and $750, three years.

Mayor Olen Gunnett and Commissioners Walter Powell and Conrad Kroll, favoring Scott, outvoted Commissioners William Lemmert and Marshall Skidmore, who favored Hall.

Commissioner Lemmert declared that, although he preferred that a CPA do the work, he would vote for Scott, who is not a CPA, if the state auditor would approve Scott's audit of the books of Allegany county for the year 1930.

The commissioner did not amplify this statement.

Two Men Slashed in Cutting Affray; One Held under Bond for Hearing

FROSTBURG, Sept. 3 — Cecil Engle, 42, of East Main street, was released from the county jail today under $500 bond for a hearing in Trial Magistrates court here on an assault charge growing out of the slashing of J. Louis Sluss, 43, of 91 Broadway, yesterday morning.

Engle was released after posting the bond before Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr., in Cumberland.

Sluss, who was taken to Miners hospital to have his wounds dressed returned to his home this morning. Engle was also cut about the face and nine stitches were required to close the wound. Sluss was cut on the right arm and below the right shoulder.

The alleged cutting affray is reported to have taken place yesterday morning in the tap room of the Gunter hotel and is said to have followed an all-night card game in which the men became involved in an argument.

States Attorney Morgan C. Harris and Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe were called to Frostburg to investigate the affair. They were told that the men had been playing cards all night and Sluss went to the tap room at 8 a. m. He was eating a sandwich when Engle entered. After a brief argument, it was said Sluss threw a glass of water in Engle's face. Engle then went to a nearby meat market, officers were told, and came back with a large butcher knife, and in the struggle both men were cut. Neither man would talk when officers questioned them, it was reported.

School 'Strike' Planned, O'Conor To Be Notified

School Board Defied at Tumultuous Mass Meeting in Midland

MIDLAND, Sept. 3 — (Special)—Mayor Verl A. Ash of Midland tonight made public a letter he said he was sending to Governor O'Conor stating that "600 citizens" of Midland, Gilmore, Carlos, Lord, Midlothian, Ocean, Mt. Savage and Zihlman had "unanimously voted to refuse to abide by the ruling" of the Allegany county board of education calling for abolition of their elementary schools or transfer of their higher grades in a consolidation move.

Mayor Ash made the letter public after a mass meeting at Firemen's hall at which the consolidation program was defended by school officials and scored by delegates from the various communities affected.

After the talks, Mayor Ash called for those favoring the consolidation to stand. No one stood — except those forced to stand in the rear by lack of seats, and none of them indicated their support. No negative vote was taken.

This vote was generally intercepted by the citizens as indicating parents will send their children to the old community schools Thursday instead of to the consolidated schools. If no teachers are provided in the old schools, children will remain home, it was stated.

Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent of schools, devoted much of his talk to school bus transportation, the purported "hazards" of which have been one of the chief objections offered by the citizens.

Allegany county has a splendid record of safety in this field, Kopp said, declaring 4,000 boys and girls were transported "successfully" last year for a total of one and one-half million "pupil miles."

Turning to other phases of the consolidation program, the superintendent cited the economies of larger administrative units and stated that there is no need for a high school in a town which can't provide 500 pupils.

Kopp was followed by Miss Lillian Compton, assistant superintendent of schools and elementary school supervisor, and Richard Rizer, county high school supervisor. Both stressed the advantages of a consolidated school, where one or more teachers teach one grade, over the old one or two-room schools, where one teacher teaches two or more grades. Other advantages were also pointed out, including the provision of better physical facilities, a wider curriculum and more extra-curricular activities.

Only voice raised in defense of the consolidation program, aside from those of the school officials, was that of Magistrate Thomas Stakem, former mayor of Midland. Stakem pointed out that the school officials were specially trained to provide the best educational facilities and recommended that the citizens heed their proposals.

A chorus of boos, hisses and jeers greeted his brief talk.

At this point, Superintendent Kopp, hardly heard above the uproar, signified his intention of leaving, offering to meet in his office any committee the group might elect.

He started down the aisle, but changed his mind and returned, remaining until the close of the tumultuous meeting after Mayor Ash called for order.

Another speaker, John L. Ort, of Midland, proposed that if a consolidation program was to be carried out, the consolidated school be located in Midland, closer to the affected communities than Frostburg or Lonaconing.

Other speakers included three members of the House of Delegates, Lester B. Reed, Charles M. See and Jonathan Sleeman; Floyd Minebrenner, Carlos; James Jenkins, Gilmore; William Hewing, Lord; Mrs. John Robertson, Thomas H. Taylor, Walter E. Ross, John Kenny and Mrs. Robert Clark, Midland; Andrew Nicklas, Ocean; Benjamin Flier, Midlothian; and Earl Kroll, Zihlman.

Delegate See stated that if he were a citizen of Midland, he would demand the legislature provide for an elective county school board. Delegate Sleeman, without directly referring to the school situation, urged citizens to let the legislature know what they want.

Over 400 Attend Miller Reunion, Hear Nazis Scored by Professor

GRANTSVILLE, Sept. 3 — Four hundred and twenty persons registered at the fifteenth annual reunion of the Joel B. Miller clan, yesterday in the Hershberger grove near here. Since the program planned for last year was cancelled because of rain, it was presented this year instead. After a bountiful basket picnic at noon, there was group singing led by J. W. Yoder, of Huntingdon, Pa. Several poems and vocal numbers were also presented.

The speaker of the day was Prof. Alvin J. Miller, of Kent State university, Kent, O. His subject was, "The Paganism of the Nazis That Has Been Used To Displace Christianity in Central Europe".

Mr. Miller has spent many months in Germany during the past few years. He said his ability to speak the Pennsylvania German dialect made it possible for him to become better acquainted with the Nazis.

In discussing the various languages or dialects spoken there, Mr. Miller said what we term "Pennsylvania Dutch" is not merely a local dialect, as some people seem to think, but is spoken in Germany much the same as it is here. He discussed the religious situation at length and brought out that the Nazis do not consider such things as love, charity, meekness and humility as virtues, but rather look upon these qualities with contempt.

At the election of officers Harry Miller was chosen president; Evan Miller, secretary; Sam Beachy and Menno Yoder, committeemen. The reunion next year will be held as usual on Labor Day on the same site.

Bowser-Wiley

Miss Hilda Virginia Wiley, youngest daughter of Mrs. Ellen Wiley, Grantsville, and the late Milton Wiley, and Wilbur Cecil Bowser, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bowser, of near here, were married at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

The ceremony was performed at the Bethesda Church of the Brethren, near here, by the Rev. H. A. Whitacre, of Flintstone, who used the ring service. For her matron of honor and only attendant, Miss Wiley chose Mrs. Lawrence Georg, Marwood, Pa., Russell Bowser, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man.

Preceding the ceremony Misses Olga Damico, Mary Scallion and Florence DiMuzio, near Johnstown, sang "I Love You Truly".

The bride was gowned in white silk jersey. She used white accessories and wore a corsage of sweet peas. Mrs. Georg wore a frock of grape-wine colored crepe, with white accessories, and her corsage was also of sweet peas. Only the immediate families and a few close friends witnessed the ceremony.

A reception was held at the home of the bride groom's parents immediately after the wedding service, at which thirty-two guests were present. The couple left shortly afterward for a wedding trip to eastern points. Upon their return they expect to reside near Grantsville.

Redecoration of Frostburg Church Nears Completion; Cost Is $2,000

FROSTBURG, Sept. 3—The work of redecorating the interior of St. Michael's Catholic church, started August 20, by the Forestti Church Decorating Company, Baltimore, has progressed to a point where the beauty of color scheme and art work is becoming apparent. The ceiling is nearly completed, and work will be started this week on the walls.

The job of redecorating, which will cost approximately $2,000, is but one of many improvements made under the direction of the Rev. Patrick J. Bradley, pastor. During the four years since Father Bradley came to the church, a debt of $3,000 has been paid, and more than $15,000 spent on improvements, including $5,000 on the Frostburg parochial school.

New lighting fixtures and blackboards have been installed in the Frostburg and Eckhart parochial schools, and the interior of both schools have been repainted.

Other improvement projects completed during Father Bradley's pastorate include the installation of three new furnaces, new stoker, new floor to the basement of the church, new garage in the rear of the rectory, convent chapel redecorated, new gold tabernacles installed in both church and convent chapels, interior of the rectory papered and painted, church grounds and cemetery beautified with additional shrubbery.

The redecorating of the church interior will be completed by October 1, when a large class will be confirmed.

Frostburg Audit Goes to Scott By 3 to 2 Vote

Skidmore and Lemmert Oppose Naming of Former County Auditor

FROSTBURG, Sept. 3—By a vote of three to two, the mayor and city commissioners tonight awarded the contract for the audit of the city's books to William Scott, of Cumberland, former county auditor.

The contract calls for audit of the books for a one-year period at a cost of $150. Scott also submitted bids of $300 for a two-year audit and $450 for a three-year audit.

Only other bidder was Charles O. Hall, a Certified Public Accountant, of Baltimore, whose bids were $400 for one year; $600, two years; and $750, three years.

Mayor Olen Gunnett and Commissioners Walter Powell and Conrad Kroll, favoring Scott, outvoted Commissioners William Lemmert and Marshall Skidmore, who favored Hall.

Commissioner Lemmert declared that, although he preferred that a CPA do the work, he would vote for Scott, who is not a CPA, if the state auditor would approve Scott's audit of the books of Allegany county for the year 1930.

The commissioner did not amplify this statement.

Two Men Slashed in Cutting Affray; One Held under Bond for Hearing

FROSTBURG, Sept. 3 — Cecil Engle, 42, of East Main street, was released from the county jail today under $500 bond for a hearing in Trial Magistrates court here on an assault charge growing out of the slashing of J. Louis Sluss, 43, of 91 Broadway, yesterday morning.

Engle was released after posting the bond before Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr., in Cumberland.

Sluss, who was taken to Miners hospital to have his wounds dressed returned to his home this morning. Engle was also cut about the face and nine stitches were required to close the wound. Sluss was cut on the right arm and below the right shoulder.

The alleged cutting affray is reported to have taken place yesterday morning in the tap room of the Gunter hotel and is said to have followed an all-night card game in which the men became involved in an argument.

States Attorney Morgan C. Harris and Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe were called to Frostburg to investigate the affair. They were told that the men had been playing cards all night and Sluss went to the tap room at 8 a. m. He was eating a sandwich when Engle entered. After a brief argument, it was said Sluss threw a glass of water in Engle's face. Engle then went to a nearby meat market, officers were told, and came back with a large butcher knife, and in the struggle both men were cut. Neither man would talk when officers questioned them, it was reported.

School 'Strike' Planned, O'Conor To Be Notified

School Board Defied at Tumultuous Mass Meeting in Midland

MIDLAND, Sept. 3 — (Special)—Mayor Verl A. Ash of Midland tonight made public a letter he said he was sending to Governor O'Conor stating that "600 citizens" of Midland, Gilmore, Carlos, Lord, Midlothian, Ocean, Mt. Savage and Zihlman had "unanimously voted to refuse to abide by the ruling" of the Allegany county board of education calling for abolition of their elementary schools or transfer of their higher grades in a consolidation move.

Mayor Ash made the letter public after a mass meeting at Firemen's hall at which the consolidation program was defended by school officials and scored by delegates from the various communities affected.

After the talks, Mayor Ash called for those favoring the consolidation to stand. No one stood — except those forced to stand in the rear by lack of seats, and none of them indicated their support. No negative vote was taken.

This vote was generally intercepted by the citizens as indicating parents will send their children to the old community schools Thursday instead of to the consolidated schools. If no teachers are provided in the old schools, children will remain home, it was stated.

Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent of schools, devoted much of his talk to school bus transportation, the purported "hazards" of which have been one of the chief objections offered by the citizens.

Allegany county has a splendid record of safety in this field, Kopp said, declaring 4,000 boys and girls were transported "successfully" last year for a total of one and one-half million "pupil miles."

Turning to other phases of the consolidation program, the superintendent cited the economies of larger administrative units and stated that there is no need for a high school in a town which can't provide 500 pupils.

Kopp was followed by Miss Lillian Compton, assistant superintendent of schools and elementary school supervisor, and Richard Rizer, county high school supervisor. Both stressed the advantages of a consolidated school, where one or more teachers teach one grade, over the old one or two-room schools, where one teacher teaches two or more grades. Other advantages, were also pointed out, including the provision of better physical facilities, a wider curriculum and more extra-curricular activities.

Only voice raised in defense of the consolidation program, aside from those of the school officials, was that of Magistrate Thomas Stakem, former mayor of Midland. Stakem pointed out that the school officials were specially trained to provide the best educational facilities and recommended that the citizens heed their proposals.

A chorus of boos, hisses and jeers greeted his brief talk.

At this point, Superintendent Kopp, hardly heard above the uproar, signified his intention of leaving, offering to meet in his office any committee the group might elect.

He started down the aisle, but changed his mind and returned, remaining until the close of the tumultuous meeting after Mayor Ash called for order.

Another speaker, John L. Ort, of Midland, proposed that if a consolidation program was to be carried out, the consolidated school be located in Midland, closer to the affected communities than Frostburg or Lonaconing.

Other speakers included three members of the House of Delegates, Lester B. Reed, Charles M. Seeland Jonathan Sleeman; Floyd Minebrenner, Carlos; James Jenkins, Gilmore; William Hewing, Lord; Mrs. John Robertson, Thomas H. Taylor, Walter E. Ross, John Kenny and Mrs. Robert Clark, Midland; Andrew Nicklas, Ocean; Benjamin Flier, Midlothian; and Earl Kroll, Zihlman.

Delegate Sleeman stated that if he were a citizen of Midland, he would demand the legislature provide for an elective county school board. Delegate Sleeman, without directly referring to the school situation, urged citizens to let the legislature know what they want.

Over 400 Attend Miller Reunion, Hear Nazis Scored by Professor

GRANTSVILLE, Sept. 3 — Four hundred and twenty persons registered at the fifteenth annual reunion of the Joel B. Miller clan, yesterday in the Hershberger grove near here. Since the program planned for last year was cancelled because of rain, it was presented this year instead. After a bountiful basket picnic at noon, there was group singing led by J. W. Yoder, of Huntingdon, Pa. Several poems and vocal numbers were also presented.

The speaker of the day was Prof. Alvin J. Miller, of Kent State university, Kent, O. His subject was, "The Paganism of the Nazis That Has Been Used To Displace Christianity in Central Europe".

Mr. Miller has spent many months in Germany during the past few years. He said his ability to speak the Pennsylvania German dialect made it possible for him to become better acquainted with the Nazis.

In discussing the various languages or dialects spoken there, Mr. Miller said what we term "Pennsylvania Dutch" is not merely a local dialect, as some people seem to think, but is spoken in Germany much the same as it is here. He discussed the religious situation at length and brought out that the Nazis do not consider such things as love, charity, meekness and humility as virtues, but rather look upon these qualities with contempt.

At the election of officers Harry Miller was chosen president; Evan Miller, secretary; Sam Beachy and Menno Yoder, committeemen. The reunion next year will be held as usual on Labor Day on the same site.

Bowser-Wiley

Miss Hilda Virginia Wiley, youngest daughter of Mrs. Ellen Wiley, Grantsville, and the late Milton Wiley, and Wilbur Cecil Bowser, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bowser, of near here, were married at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

The ceremony was performed at the Bethesda Church of the Brethren, near here, by the Rev. H. A. Whitacre, of Flintstone, who used the ring service. For her matron of honor and only attendant, Miss Wiley chose Mrs. Lawrence Georg, Marwood, Pa., Russell Bowser, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man.

Preceding the ceremony Misses Olga Damico, Mary Scallion and Florence DiMuzio, near Johnstown, sang "I Love You Truly".

The bride was gowned in white silk jersey. She used white accessories and wore a corsage of sweet peas. Mrs. Georg wore a frock of grape-wine colored crepe, with white accessories, and her corsage was also of sweet peas. Only the immediate families and a few close friends witnessed the ceremony.

A reception was held at the home of the bride groom's parents immediately after the wedding service, at which thirty-two guests were present. The couple left shortly afterward for a wedding trip to eastern points. Upon their return they expect to reside near Grantsville.

Redecoration of Frostburg Church Nears Completion; Cost Is $2,000

FROSTBURG, Sept. 3—The work of redecorating the interior of St. Michael's Catholic church, started August 20, by the Foresti Church Decorating Company, Baltimore, has progressed to a point where the beauty of color scheme and art work is becoming apparent. The ceiling is nearly completed, and work will be started this week on the walls.

The job of redecorating, which will cost approximately $2,000, is but one of many improvements made under the direction of the Rev. Patrick J. Bradley, pastor. During the four years since Father Bradley came to the church, a debt of $3,000 has been paid, and more than $15,000 spent on improvements, including $5,000 on the Frostburg parochial school.

New lighting fixtures and blackboards have been installed in the Frostburg and Eckhart parochial schools, and the interior of both schools have been repainted.

Other improvement projects completed during Father Bradley's pastorate include the installation of three new furnaces, new stoker, new floor to the basement of the church, new garage in the rear of the rectory, convent chapel redecorated, new gold tabernacles installed in both church and convent chapels, interior of the rectory papered and painted, church grounds and cemetery beautified with additional shrubbery.

The redecorating of the church interior will be completed by October 1, when a large class will be confirmed.

Emoryville Child Struck by Car As Schools Open

Keyser Boy also in Hospital after Losing Hand in 'Cycle Crash

KEYSER, W. Va., Sept. 3 — Two of Mineral county's 5,000 school-age children were under treatment today for injuries suffered in traffic accidents over the long Labor Day weekend.

William Louis Simons, 10, was struck this morning by an automobile driven by Edward Kitzmiller, Emoryville, a rural mail carrier, just after the child was dismissed from first-day classes at 11:45 in the Elk Garden public school. Young Simons was struck by the mail carrier's eastbound car as he ran across West Virginia state route 42 this morning just in front of the school building. Simons suffered facial injuries and abrasions about the arms and legs. A physician who treated the child reported to State Police that his condition was not serious. Trooper L. W. Kelly, of the Keyser State Police detachment, who investigated the accident, said that no charges were filed against Kitzmiller.

Nine-year-old Walter Rawlings, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rawlings, Water street, Keyser, had his right hand amputated at Potomac Valley hospital here yesterday afternoon after it was injured by a motorcycle in a Labor Day hill-climbing contest at Parker Grove, four miles west of Romney on U. S. Route 50. A hospital attache late today said that young Rawlings' condition was "good."

The name of the driver of the motorcycle that struck the child could not be learned here today.

Meanwhile, according to a spokesman in the office of County Superintendent of Schools Paul C. Rouzer, between 4,500 and 5,000 students reported for classes in Mineral county's twenty-two schools this morning.

Additional typing, shorthand and English classes, under Works Progress Administration sponsorship, will be held in the high school building here Tuesday and Thursday nights, from 7 to 9 o'clock, for those not enrolled in the public schools.

KEYSER, W. Va., Sept. 3 — Two of Mineral county's 5,000 school-age children were under treatment today for injuries suffered in traffic accidents over the long Labor Day weekend.

William Louis Simons, 10, was struck this morning by an automobile driven by Edward Kitzmiller, Emoryville, a rural mail carrier, just after the child was dismissed from first-day classes at 11:45 in the Elk Garden public school. Young Simons was struck by the mail carrier's eastbound car as he ran across West Virginia state route 42 this morning just in front of the school building. Simons suffered facial injuries and abrasions about the arms and legs. A physician who treated the child reported to State Police that his condition was not serious. Trooper L. W. Kelly, of the Keyser State Police detachment, who investigated the accident, said that no charges were filed against Kitzmiller.

Nine-year-old Walter Rawlings, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rawlings, Water street, Keyser, had his right hand amputated at Potomac Valley hospital here yesterday afternoon after it was injured by a motorcycle in a Labor Day hill-climbing contest at Parker Grove, four miles west of Romney on U. S. Route 50. A hospital attache late today said that young Rawlings' condition was "good."

The name of the driver of the motorcycle that struck the child could not be learned here today.

Meanwhile, according to a spokesman in the office of County Superintendent of Schools Paul C. Rouzer, between 4,500 and 5,000 students reported for classes in Mineral county's twenty-two schools this morning.

Additional typing, shorthand and English classes, under Works Progress Administration sponsorship, will be held in the high school building here Tuesday and Thursday nights, from 7 to 9 o'clock, for those not enrolled in the public schools.

Marriage Announced

Miss Betty-Jo Liller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Liller, James street, Keyser, and Emmett Kolkhorst Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Kolkhorst, McCoole, were married Saturday night in Oakland by the Rev. Minor Sprague, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church.

Attendants at the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ray, Westernport.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kolkhorst are Keyser high school graduates. Mr. Kolkhorst is employed as an apprentice in the Baltimore and Ohio railroad shops here.

The newlyweds will make their home temporarily with the bride's parents.

Stocks Continue Recovery with Steels Leading in Early Push

Gains Are Cut Down Near Close, but List Closes Higher

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP) — The stock market kept on the recovery path today although the going was a bit difficult at times.

Steels led an early morning push. The advance faltered after the first hour, however, and extreme gains running to a point or so were reduced or replaced with in some cases.

The Associated Press average of sixty issues managed to emerge up .2 of a point at 43.8. Transfers of 544,550 shares compared with 563,510 last Friday.

Wall street apparently was unexcited by the principal news of the day involved in the White House announcement the government would lease Western Hemisphere naval and air bases from Great Britain. This was pretty well in line with financial forecasts.

In scanning today's trading volume it was recalled that in the war-boom session following Labor Day a year ago an aggregate of nearly 6,000,000 shares changed hands. For the entire month of August, 1940, the total was only about 7,600,000 shares.

Steels were not greatly disturbed by an estimated drop of 8.8 points in this week's mill operations. At that, U. S. Steel and Youngstown Sheet were able to retain but ⅛ of a point each of a forenoon jump, while Bethlehem and Republic were off a shade.

Among issues with plus signs were Chrysler, American Telephone, Dow Chemical, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, Douglas Aircraft, Zenith Radio, McKeesport Tinplate, du Pont and Union Carbide.

Curb gainers of fractions to a point or more included Aluminum of America, Bell Aircraft, American Cyanamid "B," National Steel Car and Standard Steel Spring. The turnover here was around 83,000 shares against 78,000 Friday.

Chicago Grain Prices

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (AP)—Chicago grain futures closed strong today at or near the best prices for the session after moving erratically earlier over a range of about one cent.

Wheat finished ¾-1⅛ cent higher than Saturday's final quotations upon a late display of strength at Minneapolis attributed to mill buying. Closing prices were September 74-74⅛, December 76 ½-⅝, May 77 ⅞-78. But profit taking sales after the first hour forced a reaction which dropped quotations to below the previous closing levels. The market again firmed in the closing minutes at the best levels in a month.

LEE WINTER DANCE STUDIO

Cor. Baltimore and Centre St. Cumberland, Md.

Dear Ruthie:

I don't know whether I look as old as I feel but heavens how time does fly. Can you imagine Mary Jane Smith being old enough to dance? You know the one I mean our neighbor on the right. She is only five but absolutely precious. Her mother enrolled her today at the Lee Winter Studios because she wants Mary Jane to be popular and develop a strong body and be graceful (I'm quoting her mother). I guess Mrs. Smith is thinking of what dancing has done for me. I used to have dreadful colds and was out of school a lot (too much my teachers said) before I started taking dancing five years ago. Now look at me! I'm almost disgustingly healthy and haven't had a really hard cold since. Mother says I've saved the price of my dancing a dozen times by gaining real health. Mary Jane wanted to study only tap dancing, but we have persuaded her to take everything. After all it pays not to be one-sided in anything. As Mr. Winter says you don't go to school and study arithmetic only; you must have everything to be really educated. Mary Jane will be in the kindergarten class with seven or eight other kiddies her age. You know all of our classes are small so that Judy Corrigan (our teacher from New York) can watch each one of us and help us individually. The only large class is our Winterettes and they do line work. I'm telling you this because I know you'll want to know everything now that you're actually enrolled. By the way, I met a smooth new boy and he has a friend. I'll introduce you after dancing Saturday night. See you then—

Love, Beatrice.

NEW SCREEN TEAM

Clarke Gable and Hedy Lamarr appear in the same picture for the first time in "Boom Town," adventure story of oil men and the women they love, which opens tomorrow on the Maryland screen with Spencer Tracy and Claudette Colbert completing the cast.

Theaters Today

Bestor's Orchestra Is Coming to Strand

Don Bestor's radio, recording and dance orchestra comes to the Strand tomorrow (one day only) through arrangements completed with Consolidated Radio Artists, Inc.

Long a favorite in the middle West, Don took his band to Broadway in 1932. He appeared first at the Hotel New Yorker and from there he moved to the Lexington hotel. Next came an engagement at the Pennsylvania hotel and simultaneously the orchestra was engaged to broadcast Jack Benny's radio show. This was the beginning of a long radio association with Jack Benny and together they launched the Jello series of network programs. Going West Bestor's orchestra appeared at the Cocoanut Grove of the Hotel Ambassador, Los Angeles.

The screen show is "Pier 13", which promises thrills and laughter. New York's waterfront is the background of the picture, which is based upon thrills and laughter.

Lynn Bari, last seen in "Earthbound" and "Lillian Russell", plays the leading feminine role opposite Lloyd Nolan, who has a surprise role that is said to equal his appearance in "Johnny Apollo." Also included in the featured cast are Joan Valerie and Douglas Fowley.

Opening Friday at noon will be "Shine's Happiness Week" and the attraction on the screen will be Bing Crosby in "Rhythm on the River."

Strip Tease by Men Is in Maryland Film

A strip tease can be done by men as well as women, although there is a vast difference in the desired effect. A feminine strip is designed to increase blood-pressure; a masculine one to provoke laughter. The latter is the intent of the "underwear scene" Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy do in "Boom Town," the action picture which comes to the Maryland theater tomorrow with Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr also starred.

The scene was amusing on the set and it was later cut and edited for the picture. In the story, it follows a head-first dive by the two stars into a puddle of oozing, sloshy, oily mud to escape bullets during a gun battle. It is played in a set representing a cheap room in an oil town.

Nick Carter Story Is Embassy Feature

Walter Pidgeon plays the leading role in the second of the Nick Carter series, "Phantom Raiders," now showing at the Embassy theater.

Pidgeon made three pictures for Universal, then was borrowed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for "Saratoga." During another M-G-M picture, "My Dear Miss Aldrich," M-G-M purchased his contract and he has remained with this company ever since.

Also showing are Bob Steele in "Riders of the Sage," and the twelfth chapter, "Drums of Fu Manchu."

Naval Battle Is Pictured in Feature

High on the bridge of an antique, rocking, wooden warship Errol Flynn directed an English attack on Spanish galleon. Cannon roar, blasting great holes in the sides of each ship, men clambered up the rigging, prepared to board the opposing vessel, knives held in their teeth, pistols in their belts, blood on their faces and half-naked bodies.

The sails bellow and the ships careened dangerously as they slide together. The director Alan Hale, Gilbert Roland, Claude Raines, J. M. Kerrigan and a dozen other actors, leaped into action at the same moment. Swords clashed, men tumbled between the grinding ships, ropes and spars fell from the rigging where hand to hand battles were waged. On a parralel high above the whole melee, the director stood to direct the fight, one of the most spectacular of the action scenes of "The Sea Hawk", which is now showing at the New Liberty theater.

Two Features Are Offered at Garden

Allen Jenkins, Warner Brothers comedian, has made a color movie of the abalone fishing industry and it is to be seen in the comedy now showing at the Garden Theater.

Every detail of the industry is presented in the more than 850 feet of film in the movie. Included are scenes on the abalone boat, showing the divers going over the side for their stay of two hours and more.

Jean Hersholt stars in "Meet Doctor Christian," also showing at the Garden.

Supporting the star in this RKO Radio picture are Paul Harvey, Dorothy Lovett, Robert Baldwin, Enid Bennett and Marcia Mae Jones.

Gains Are Cut Down Near Close, but List Closes Higher

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP) — The stock market kept on the recovery path today although the going was a bit difficult at times.

Steels led an early morning push. The advance faltered after the first hour, however, and extreme gains running to a point or so were reduced or replaced with in some cases.

The Associated Press average of sixty issues managed to emerge up .2 of a point at 43.8. Transfers of 544,550 shares compared with 563,510 last Friday.

Wall street apparently was unexcited by the principal news of the day involved in the White House announcement the government would lease Western Hemisphere naval and air bases from Great Britain. This was pretty well in line with financial forecasts.

In scanning today's trading volume it was recalled that in the war-boom session following Labor Day a year ago an aggregate of nearly 6,000,000 shares changed hands. For the entire month of August, 1940, the total was only about 7,600,000 shares.

Steels were not greatly disturbed by an estimated drop of 8.8 points in this week's mill operations. At that, U. S. Steel and Youngstown Sheet were able to retain but ⅛ of a point each of a forenoon jump, while Bethlehem and Republic were off a shade.

Among issues with plus signs were Chrysler, American Telephone, Dow Chemical, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, Douglas Aircraft, Zenith Radio, McKeesport Tinplate, du Pont and Union Carbide.

Curb gainers of fractions to a point or more included Aluminum of America, Bell Aircraft, American Cyanamid "B," National Steel Car and Standard Steel Spring. The turnover here was around 83,000 shares against 78,000 Friday.

Chicago Grain Prices

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (AP)—Chicago grain futures closed strong today at or near the best prices for the session after moving erratically earlier over a range of about one cent.

Wheat finished ¾-1¼ cent higher than Saturday's final quotations upon a late display of strength at Minneapolis attributed to mill buying. Closing prices were September 74-74⅛, December 76 ½-⅝, May 77 ⅞-78. But profit taking sales after the first hour forced a reaction which dropped quotations to below the previous closing levels. The market again firmed in the closing minutes at the best levels in a month.

NEW SCREEN TEAM

Clarke Gable and Hedy Lamarr appear in the same picture for the first time in "Boom Town," adventure story of oil men and the women they love, which opens tomorrow on the Maryland screen with Spencer Tracy and Claudette Colbert completing the cast.

Bestor's Orchestra Is Coming to Strand

Don Bestor's radio, recording and dance orchestra comes to the Strand tomorrow (one day only) through arrangements completed with Consolidated Radio Artists, Inc.

Long a favorite in the middle West, Don took his band to Broadway in 1932. He appeared first at the Hotel New Yorker and from there he moved to the Lexington hotel. Next came an engagement at the Pennsylvania hotel and simultaneously the orchestra was engaged to broadcast Jack Benny's radio show. This was the beginning of a long radio association with Jack Benny and together they launched the Jello series of network programs. Going West Bestor's orchestra appeared at the Cocoanut Grove of the Hotel Ambassador, Los Angeles.

The screen show is "Pier 13", which promises thrills and laughter. New York's waterfront is the background of the picture, which is based upon thrills and laughter.

Lynn Bari, last seen in "Earthbound" and "Lillian Russell", plays the leading feminine role opposite Lloyd Nolan, who has a surprise role that is said to equal his appearance in "Johnny Apollo." Also included in the featured cast are Joan Valerie and Douglas Fowley.

Opening Friday at noon will be "Shine's Happiness Week" and the attraction on the screen will be Bing Crosby in "Rhythm on the River."

Strip Tease by Men Is in Maryland Film

A strip tease can be done by men as well as women, although there is a vast difference in the desired effect. A feminine strip is designed to increase blood-pressure; a masculine one to provoke laughter. The latter is the intent of the "underwear scene" Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy do in "Boom Town," the action picture which comes to the Maryland theater tomorrow with Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr also starred.

The scene was amusing on the set and it was later cut and edited for the picture. In the story, it follows a head-first dive by the two stars into a puddle of oozing, sloshy, oily mud to escape bullets during a gun battle. It is played in a set representing a cheap room in an oil town.

Nick Carter Story Is Embassy Feature

Walter Pidgeon plays the leading role in the second of the Nick Carter series, "Phantom Raiders," now showing at the Embassy theater.

Pidgeon made three pictures for Universal, then was borrowed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for "Saratoga." During another M-G-M picture, "My Dear Miss Aldrich," M-G-M purchased his contract and he has remained with this company ever since.

High on the bridge of an antique, rocking, wooden warship Errol Flynn directed an English attack on Spanish galleon. Cannon roar, blasting great holes in the sides of each ship, men clambered up the rigging, prepared to board the opposing vessel, knives held in their teeth, pistols in their belts, blood on their faces and half-naked bodies.

The sails bellow and the ships careened dangerously as they slide together. The director Alan Hale, Gilbert Roland, Claude Raines, J. M. Kerrigan and a dozen other actors, leaped into action at the same moment. Swords clashed, men tumbled between the grinding ships, ropes and spars fell from the rigging where hand to hand battles were waged. On a parralel high above the whole melee, the director stood to direct the fight, one of the most spectacular of the action scenes of "The Sea Hawk", which is now showing at the New Liberty theater.

Two Features Are Offered at Garden

LEE WINTER DANCE STUDIO

Cor. Baltimore and Centre St.
Cumberland, Md.

Dear Ruthie:

I don't know whether I look as old as I feel but heavens how time does fly. Can you imagine Mary Jane Smith being old enough to dance? You know the one I mean our neighbor on the right. She is only five but absolutely precious. Her mother enrolled her today at the Lee Winter Studios because she wants Mary Jane to be popular and develop a strong body and be graceful (I'm quoting her mother). I guess Mrs. Smith is thinking of what dancing has done for me. I used to have dreadful colds and was out of school a lot (too much my teachers said) before I started taking dancing five years ago. Now look at me! I'm almost disgustingly healthy and haven't had a really hard cold since. Mother says I've saved the price of my dancing a dozen times by gaining real health. Mary Jane wanted to study only tap dancing, but we have persuaded her to take everything. After all it pays not to be one-sided in anything. As Mr. Winter says you don't go to school and study arithmetic only; you must have everything to be really educated. Mary Jane will be in the kindergarten class with seven or eight other kiddies her age. You know all of our classes are small so that Judy Corrigan (our teacher from New York) can watch each one of us and help us individually. The only large class is our Winterettes and they do line work. I'm telling you this because I know you'll want to know everything now that you're actually enrolled. By the way, I met a smooth new boy and he has a friend. I'll introduce you after dancing Saturday night. See you then—

Love, Beatrice.

Chicago White Sox Beat Tigers 10 to 2

Detroit Loses More Ground in Pennant Chase

Barney McCosky Injured Trying To Catch Hard-hit Liner

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (AP)—The unpredictable Chicago White Sox put the "Indian" sign on Detroit's Tigers again today.

Scoring seven runs in a first inning marathon, the Sox trounced the Tigers 10 to 2 to throw another damper on Detroit's pennant chances and put the third-place Tigers four full games back of the league-leading Cleveland Indians, against whom the Sox have had little success all season.

Detroit, dropping a half game behind the second place New York Yankees, lost the services of Barney McCosky, possibly for as long as a week. The star center fielder strained muscles in his side in the second inning trying for a diving catch of Taft Wright's double.

Today's victory was nothing like either game of the close double victory which Chicago scored yesterday over the Bengals. Before the first inning was over 13 Chicago batsmen had gone to the plate, scoring seven runs on four hits, a sacrifice, six passes and one error.

Fred Hutchinson, young right hander, gave up three walks and two hits before he gave way to Hal Newhouser. The latter walked three batsmen and allowed two hits before Clay Smith took over the hurling chore and ended the inning by forcing Julius Solters to pop out with the sacks loaded. Smith worked until lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth, Tom Seats hurling the final inning for the Tigers.

Connie Mack Still Sees Hope of Capturing Flag

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 3—Connie Mack was born the week after Lee beat Burnside at the battle of Fredericksburg, December, 1862. Today, going on seventy-eight, this timeless character is talking of getting his ball club into the first division next year.

In the year of his eightieth birthday, 1942, Connie confidently expects to win the pennant. Having done so, and added a couple of more pennants to the string, he will no doubt tear the team apart and start building for the 1950's. Mr. Mack generally spends ten to fifteen years on construction work between championship teams.

He was through with ball playing and already a successful manager at the time of the Spanish-American war. When Mr. McGillicuddy, as his parents knew him, took over the Athletics of Philadelphia in 1901, he had not as yet perfected his technique with winners—build 'em up, win a few tear 'em apart, and start building again. Connie was satisfied with his first winner. He let it stand for a while.

Connie Mack Recalls

That was in 1902, when Mr. Mack was a slim, dark, upstanding young Irishman of 40, already given to sober civilian clothes and stiff collars on the ball field.

"I had Plank and Waddell pitching," recalls the sage, "and my catcher was Ossie Schreckengost. There was the Cross boys and Murphy and Davis in the infield, and in the outfield there was Hartsel and Seybold and Fultz. We didn't have a world series that year. Maybe we would have been whipped. Pittsburgh won in the National League, and they had a real good team."

Mr. Mack thought his own team had another pennant in its system, so he patiently waited till Jimmy Collins's Red Sox got over their hot spell of 1903-04. Then he won in 1905, with the ball club of 1902, except that Lord was in the outfield and Andy Coakley and the great Chief Bender had taken their places beside Plank and Waddell on the pitching line.

"In the series," says Mr. Mack mildly, "we were cooled off."

They were—Mathewson pitched three shutouts, and Joe McGinnity one. Over the next few years Connie watched his champions wear out, giving here and there at the knees and elbows. Whenever a seam popped, he was ready with a new ball player. He was nearly 50 in 1910, but he had his second great ball club.

Harry Davis, Hartsel, and Eddie Plank were the only survivors from Connie's first championship team. Jack Coombs bolstered the pitching. Amos Strunk and Rube Oldring appeared in the outfield. The infield had three brilliant newcomers, Eddie Collins, Jack Barry, and Home Run Baker. Stuffy McGinnis was there and ready to spell Davis when he tired.

Greatest Team Didn't Win Pennant

"That team won me four pennants," muses Mr. Mack. "A little later we got Wally Schang for catcher, and near the end I brought up Joe Bush and Herbert Pennock. Funny thing about that team, when they were at their greatest—1912—they didn't win the pennant. That shows what can happen to a great team even before she begins to break up. We won in 1910, 1911. Then we missed. Then we won in 1913, 1914, on the way down. You just couldn't put your finger on the trouble in 1912. I think that year it was the greatest team I ever managed."

So, Mr. Mack tore it apart in 1915, and began to build again, as fresh and eager as a blooming Durocher, though he was over 50 then and 67 when he won his next pennant—with Grove, Earnshaw, Walberg, Foxx, Bishop, Boley, Dykes, Haas, Simmons, Miller and Cochrane.

And he was 71 when he tore that one up, and now he is 78 and talking about Hayes, Seibert, Brancato, Rubeling, McCoy, Vaughan and Chapman.

"We can finish sixth this year," says Mr. Mack placidly. "We may do it, too, now that some of my young men have learned to pitch. I don't know why we shouldn't be in the first division next year. This is a young team. It has fine possibilities. I can certainly win a pennant in a few years, maybe in two years."

Mr. Mack almost died last year. That has no effect on his plans.

"The way I feel, I will certainly be in baseball for some time."

As we were saying, Connie Mack was born the week after Lee beat Burnside at the battle of Fredericksburg.

STANDING OF CLUBS

	W.	L.	Pct.
Old Germans	7	1	.875
Rainsburg	6	1	.857
Flintstone	4	4	.500
Grantsville	3	5	.375
Paw Paw	2	5	.286
Barrelville	1	7	.125

The Rainsburg (Pa.) Red Sox continued their fight to overtake the Old Germans in the race for second half honors of the Tri-County Baseball League with a 7-2 win over Flintstone Sunday, while the Germans moved a notch closer when Barrelville tossers forfeited their game with the leaders.

Team standings remained the same but the fifth place Paw Paw Boosters gained on the fourth place Grantsville nine with a win featured by a four-run rally in the last inning.

With the Old Germans having but two more gomes of the regular season, they can be prevented from winning both halves of the race only by the Rainsburg team, which may have to replay a tie game with Paw Paw to settle the fight. The tie game may also he replayed if it would affect the Red Sox's chances in a post-season playoff for second place, between the four teams behind the leaders.

Only One Upset Marks Play in National Singles

Welby Van Horn Is Beaten by 22-year-old Harris Everett

By BILL WHITE

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP) — Welby Van Horn, who set the tournament on fire last year, was the only fatality among the seeded stars at the second day of the National singles tennis championships today at Forest Hills.

Van Horn's conqueror was 22-year old Harris Everett of Jacksonville, Fla., a University of North Carolina ace who has had an "Almost" year—almost beating several nationally ranked stars in previous tournaments.

The scores in the hours-long match were 3-6, 5-7, 6-3, 6-0, 15-B. The defeat, not unexpected, brought to a drab conclusion the year's career of the flashy Californian who last year was a finalist here, bowing to Bobby Riggs.

Otherwise the favorites mowed down lesser-known competition.

However, standing out in sharp contrast to the rest of the matches was the manner in which National Champion Bobby Riggs opened the defense of his title. Pitted against Ernie Sutter, the former Intercollegiate champion, Bobby showed a game ready to carry him far in this meet. He covered worlds of court and showed virtually no flaws in his armor as he romped through 6-2, 6-2, 8-6.

The two opponents expected to give him the most trouble—Frank Kovacs of Oakland and Don McNeill of Oklahoma City came through too—but in widely separated manners. Kovacs dreamed and laughed his way to a 6-1, 2-6, 6-1, 10-8 victory over the former Dartmouth captain, J. Norman Anderson, while McNeill was the cautious workman in beating Joe Fishback of New York, 6-4, 6-4, 9-7.

They were joined by Frankie Parker, who beat back the two-handed South American champion, Pancho Segura, 6-3, 6-1, 7-5; by Joe Hunt, Henry Prusoff, Bitsy Grant and Elwood Cook, none of whom looked good enough to give Riggs much trouble.

The women's seeded stars swung along effortlessly. Helen Jacobs taught Cecile Bowes of Philadelphia, the national squash racquets champion, a lesson by 6-1, 6-0. Alice Marble breezed through Josephine Sanfilippo of Brooklyn, 6-0-6-1 and Sarah Palfrey turned back Nina Brown of England by the same scores.

The Yankees in Pursuit

A few weeks ago when the Yankees were nine games back, apparently out of the running—maybe jammed into the second division—I happened to be in their clubhouse before a game.

They still hadn't quit. They still refused to believe that after mopping up for four years — after smashing the National League — they had dropped that far back. I'll admit they were a trifle dazed, but far from through. They were staggering, but still on their feet.

"If we had played the same brand of ball we've been playing for four years," Bill Dickey told me, "we'd be at least 18 games in front. Now we're nine games behind. That doesn't make any sense. I know they haven't slipped that margin — 27 games—in just a year. I've still got the feeling—and so have most of the others—that we'll be out there chasing some pennant leader yet. Maybe we won't catch him, but he'll feel our breath on his neck."

Now the Yankees are on the big chase again. They may not win, but they have at least refused to call it a season and throw aside the old toga. They have at last thrown off their winding sheets.

Their last home stand, especially against Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago, was something to talk about. Taking nine out of ten, with a 1-0 lone defeat against them, from these main challengers was one of the big flares of the season. Almost as big a flare as Detroit's all-season play against big odds — the Big Tent feature.

The Yankee adventure from now on will be one of the main September features, with the Reds solidly packed in front of the National League.

Bill Dickey was right. Whatever happened up to the middle of August "just doesn't make sense."

When It Comes to Thrills

After all, when it comes to a series of thrills, football leads the parade with a few kilometers to spare.

You get a two-minute thrill in the Kentucky Derby or the Preakness—

You get a few minutes' thrill when Joe Louis starts punching—

You get an afternoon of thrills in any world series game, which is neck and neck with football.

But football's general average leaves the rest of the pack behind.

You can take that Packers-All-Star game in Chicago before 85,000 spectators who saw a total of 73 scoring points hung against the arc lights.

Or you can take the Eastern All-Star line-up against the Giants at the Polo Grounds Wednesday night, another certain thriller, and from there on wait for the late September openings that should bring on one of the best seasons the game has ever known—quite probably the best of all time.

The Midwest has already drawn its start with Chicago's big game. The East now gets its big show—and with only a few intermissions the interminable buzz of the football bug will be with us until the bowl games of January.

The Open Game

The Packers-All-Star game in Chicago proves again, as the war has proved, that any winning offense belongs to the air. An Isbell and a Hutson—a Herber and a Hutson — a Parker — an O'Brien — a Baugh— an Eakin—many more—mean offense.

The same applies to college football. Power and speed are a bigger factor in college football than they happen to be in the pro-game. Naturally the seasoned pros are more advanced in passing—and pass receiving. But the pick of the pros still come from the colleges, where forward passing gets its start.

Bo McMillin of Indiana has said that kids don't throw a football around as much as they do a baseball. That is true. But the kids of today are throwing footballs twenty to one over ten years ago. A baseball is easy enough to throw. A football isn't. But high school and prep school coaches are turning in a fine job in this respect—and each year you'll see better passing.

The game can also use more high-class receivers. A Don Hutson is even more valuable than a great fewer Hutsons than there are peggers through the air.

Hutson of Green Bay comes close to being the most dangerous offensive factor in football. At least, I know that he brings more chills to the spines of rival coaches when he swings down the field.

How to Run Sport

The best answer I know concerning the conduct of professional sport is given by Jerry Geisler, head man of the boxing and racing commissions of California. Mr. Geisler cleaned up the tangled boxing situation in a few days. He straightened out the even more tangled racing snarl in storter time.

"The answer is simple enough," he told me, on his arrival in New York. "Bring everything to the open. Nothing behind closed doors. Sport belongs to the people who support sport. Let them know everything that is happening. Keep the record where everyone can see it.

"There are always certain laws. See that they are enforced, without any social, monetary or political influence. When this is done there can be no such snarls and tangles and troubles as we have had. I still say that the people who support sport are entitled to know every move that is made, and why it is made."

If Jerry Geisler of California hasn't the right answer, I don't know just what the right answer is.

Today's Pitchers

Games Wednesday and probable pitchers (won-lost records in parenthesis):

National League

Pittsburgh, at Cincinnati (night)—Butcher (7-8) vs. Walters (18-12).

Chicago at St. Louis (night)—Passeau (17-11) vs. Bowman (6-4).

Brooklyn at Philadelphia (night)—Tamulis (7-4) vs Frye (0-3).

Boston at New York—Strincevich (4-6) vs. Lohrman (9-10).

American League

Cleveland at Detroit—Feller (23-7) vs Rowe (12-3).

St. Louis at Chicago—Harris (8-12) vs. Lee (9-12).

New York at Washington—Sundra (3-5) vs. Krakauskas (0-4).

Philadelphia at Boston (2)—Potter (8-12) and Ross (5-7) or Caster (5-16) vs. Wilson (10-) and Johnson (4-2).

Senators Win over Hick's Aces 2 to 1

The Senators of the East Side Softball League defeated Hick's Aces in a tight battle 2 to 1.

The five-hit pitching of Elwood Simpson and the timely hitting of Hammond and V. Jones along with Simpson's three bingles won the game.

The line score:

SENATORS	010 100—2	11	1
HICK'S ACES	100 000—1	5	3

Simpson and Pope; Nailor and Page.

Chicago White Sox Beat Tigers 10 to 2

Detroit Loses More Ground in Pennant Chase

Barney McCosky Injured Trying To Catch Hard-hit Liner

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (AP)—The unpredictable Chicago White Sox put the "Indian" sign on Detroit's Tigers again today.

Scoring seven runs in a first inning marathon, the Sox trounced the Tigers 10 to 2 to throw another damper on Detroit's pennant chances and put the third-place Tigers four full games back of the league-leading Cleveland Indians, against whom the Sox have had little success all season.

Detroit, dropping a half game behind the second place New York Yankees, lost the services of Barney McCosky, possibly for as long as a week. The star center fielder strained muscles in his side in the second inning trying for a diving catch of Taft Wright's double.

Today's victory was nothing like either game of the close double victory which Chicago scored yesterday over the Bengals. Before the first inning was over 13 Chicago batsmen had gone to the plate, scoring seven runs on four hits, a sacrifice, six passes and one error.

Fred Hutchinson, young right hander, gave up three walks and two hits before he gave way to Hal Newhouser. The latter walked three batsmen and allowed two hits before Clay Smith took over the hurling chore and ended the inning by forcing Julius Solters to pop out with the sacks loaded. Smith worked until lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth, Tom Seats hurling the final inning for the Tigers.

Funny thing about that team, when they were at their greatest—1912—they didn't win the pennant. That shows what can happen to a great team even before she begins to break up. We won in 1910, 1911. Then we missed. Then we won in 1913, 1914, on the way down. You just couldn't put your finger on the trouble in 1912. I think that year it was the greatest team I ever managed."

So, Mr. Mack tore it apart in 1915, and began to build again, as fresh and eager as a blooming Durocher, though he was over 50 then and 67 when he won his next pennant—with Grove, Earnshaw, Walberg, Foxx, Bishop, Boley, Dykes, Haas, Simmons, Miller and Cochrane.

And he was 71 when he tore that one up, and now he is 78 and talking about Hayes, Seibert, Brancato, Rubeling, McCoy, Vaughan and Chapman.

"We can finish sixth this year," says Mr. Mack placidly. "We may do it, too, now that some of my young men have learned to pitch. I don't know why we shouldn't be in the first division next year. This is a young team. It has fine possibilities. I can certainly win a pennant in a few years, maybe in two years."

Mr. Mack almost died last year. That has no effect on his plans.

"The way I feel, I will certainly be in baseball for some time."

As we were saying, Connie Mack was born the week after Lee beat Burnside at the battle of Fredericksburg.

STANDING OF CLUBS

	W.	L.	Pct.
Old Germans	7	1	.875
Rainsburg	6	1	.857
Flintstone	4	4	.500
Grantsville	3	5	.375
Paw Paw	2	5	.286
Barrelville	1	7	.125

The Rainsburg (Pa.) Red Sox continued their fight to overtake the Old Germans in the race for second half honors of the Tri-County Baseball League with a 7-2 win over Flintstone Sunday, while the Germans moved a notch closer when Barrelville tossers forfeited their game with the leaders.

Team standings remained the same but the fifth place Paw Paw Boosters gained on the fourth place Grantsville nine with a win featured by a four-run rally in the last inning.

With the Old Germans having but two more gomes of the regular season, they can be prevented from winning both halves of the race only by the Rainsburg team, which may have to replay a tie game with Paw Paw to settle the fight. The tie game may also be replayed if it would affect the Red Sox's chances in a post-season playoff for second place, between the four teams behind the leaders.

Only One Upset Marks Play in National Singles

Welby Van Horn Is Beaten by 22-year-old Harris Everett

By BILL WHITE

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP) — Welby Van Horn, who set the tournament on fire last year, was the only fatality among the seeded stars at the second day of the National singles tennis championships today at Forest Hills.

Van Horn's conqueror was 22-year old Harris Everett of Jacksonville, Fla., a University of North Carolina ace who has had an "Almost" year—almost beating several nationally ranked stars in previous tournaments.

The scores in the hours-long match were 3-6, 5-7, 6-3, 6-0, 15-B. The defeat, not unexpected, brought to a drab conclusion the year's career of the flashy Californian who last year was a finalist here, bowing to Bobby Riggs.

Otherwise the favorites mowed down lesser-known competition.

However, standing out in sharp contrast to the rest of the matches was the manner in which National Champion Bobby Riggs opened the defense of his title. Pitted against Ernie Sutter, the former Intercollegiate champion, Bobby showed a game ready to carry him far in this meet. He covered worlds of court and showed virtually no flaws in his armor as he romped through 6-2, 6-2, 8-6.

The two opponents expected to give him the most trouble—Frank Kovacs of Oakland and Don McNeill of Oklahoma City came through too—but in widely separated manners. Kovacs dreamed and laughed his way to a 6-1, 2-6, 6-1, 10-8 victory over the former Dartmouth captain, J. Norman Anderson, while McNeill was the cautious workman in beating Joe Fishback of New York, 6-4, 6-4, 9-7.

They were joined by Frankie Parker, who beat back the two-handed South American champion, Pancho Segura, 6-3, 6-1, 7-5; by Joe Hunt, Henry Prusoff, Bitsy Grant and Elwood Cook, none of whom looked good enough to give Riggs much trouble.

The women's seeded stars swung along effortlessly. Helen Jacobs taught Cecile Bowes of Philadelphia, the national squash racquets champion, a lesson by 6-1, 6-0. Alice Marble breezed through Josephine Sanfilippo of Brooklyn, 6-0-6-1 and Sarah Palfrey turned back Nina Brown of England by the same scores.

The Yankees in Pursuit

A few weeks ago when the Yankees were nine games back, apparently out of the running—maybe jammed into the second division—I happened to be in their clubhouse before a game.

They still hadn't quit. They still refused to believe that after mopping up for four years — after smashing the National League — they had dropped that far back. I'll admit they were a trifle dazed, but far from through. They were staggering, but still on their feet.

"If we had played the same brand of ball we've been playing for four years," Bill Dickey told me, "we'd be at least 18 games in front. Now we're nine games behind. That doesn't make any sense. I know they haven't slipped that margin — 27 games—in just a year. I've still got the feeling—and so have most of the others—that we'll be out there chasing some pennant leader yet. Maybe we won't catch him, but he'll feel our breath on his neck."

Now the Yankees are on the big chase again. They may not win, but they have at least refused to call it a season and throw aside the old toga. They have at last thrown off their winding sheets.

Their last home stand, especially against Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago, was something to talk about. Taking nine out of ten, with a 1-0 lone defeat against them, from these main challengers was one of the big flares of the season. Almost as big a flare as Detroit's all-season play against big odds — the Big Tent feature.

The Yankee adventure from now on will be one of the main September features, with the Reds solidly packed in front of the National League.

Bill Dickey was right. Whatever happened up to the middle of August "just doesn't make sense."

When It Comes to Thrills

After all, when it comes to a series of thrills, football leads the parade with a few kilometers to spare.

You get a two-minute thrill in the Kentucky Derby or the Preakness—

You get a few minutes' thrill when Joe Louis starts punching—

You get an afternoon of thrills in any world series game, which is neck and neck with football.

But football's general average leaves the rest of the pack behind.

You can take that Packers-All-Star game in Chicago proves again, as the war has proved, that any winning offense belongs to the air. An Isbell and a Hutson—a Herber and a Hutson — a Parker — an O'Brien — a Baugh— an Eakin—many more—mean offense.

The same applies to college football. Power and speed are a bigger factor in college football than they happen to be in the pro-game. Naturally the seasoned pros are more advanced in passing—and pass receiving. But the pick of the pros still come from the colleges, where forward passing gets its start.

Bo McMillin of Indiana has said that kids don't throw a football around as much as they do a baseball. That is true. But the kids of today are throwing footballs twenty to one over ten years ago. A baseball is easy enough to throw. A football isn't. But high school and prep school coaches are turning in a fine job in this respect—and each year you'll see better passing.

The game can also use more high-class receivers. A Don Hutson is even more valuable than a great fewer Hutsons than there are peggers through the air.

Hutson of Green Bay comes close to being the most dangerous offensive factor in football. At least, I know that he brings more chills to the spines of rival coaches when he swings down the field.

How to Run Sport

The best answer I know concerning the conduct of professional sport is given by Jerry Geisler, head man of the boxing and racing commissions of California. Mr. Geisler cleaned up the tangled boxing situation in a few days. He straightened out the even more tangled racing snarl in storter time.

"The answer is simple enough," he told me, on his arrival in New York. "Bring everything to the open. Nothing behind closed doors. Sport belongs to the people who support sport. Let them know everything that is happening. Keep the record where everyone can see it.

"There are always certain laws. See that they are enforced, without any social, monetary or political influence. When this is done there can be no such snarls and tangles and troubles as we have had. I still say that the people who support sport are entitled to know every move that is made, and why it is made."

If Jerry Geisler of California hasn't the right answer, I don't know just what the right answer is.

Senators Win over Hick's Aces 2 to 1

The Senators of the East Side Softball League defeated Hick's Aces in a tight battle 2 to 1.

The five-hit pitching of Elwood Simpson and the timely hitting of Hammond and V. Jones along with Simpson's three bingles won the game.

The line score:

SENATORS	010 100—2	11	1
HICK'S ACES	100 000—1	5	3

Simpson and Pope; Nailor and Page.

Reds Gain Ground with 4-3 Win over Cards

Are Now Eight Games Ahead of Brooklyn Team

Oldtimer, Jimmy Wilson, Delivers Timely Double in Eighth

CINCINNATI, Sept. 3 (AP)—Forty-year old Jimmy Wilson, sometime manager, coach and catcher, who has a son nearly ready for pro baseball, batted the Reds to a 4-3 victory over St. Louis today to send them eight full games ahead of idle Brooklyn in the National League pennant race.

The champions' 11th triumph in 15 starts was also fireman Joe Beggs' ninth in a relief role, and dropped the Cards to a third-place tie with Pittsburgh.

Jimmy got his chance in the eighth and turned in his second double since returning to active duty yesterday as sub for the injured Ernie Lombardi.

Beggs, credited with the Reds' 32nd one-run victory, really turned on the hose when he relieved Witt Guise, a portside knuckler just up from Columbia of the Sally League in the seventh period.

Witt, who otherwise pitched effective ball, gave up three dinky singles to load the bases in the seventh, walked one run across on four pitches and had thrown two balls to Mickey Owen when Beggs came on.

The former Yank Farm-hand persuaded Mickey to put out a double play ball to Lonnie Frey and the threat was over.

Bi-State League Shaughnessy Series To Start Next Week

A meeting of the Bi-State League officials and club representatives was held last night at the Clary Club and arrangements were completed for the playoffs.

Representatives of the Westvaco team notified the league that lack of players made it necessary for them to drop out of the playoffs. Westvaco had finished third in the regular season's play.

A toss for playoff positions was taken by Midland and Cumberland with Midland winning. These two teams finished in a tie for fourth place in the league. Westvaco's withdrawal made a playoff for the fourth position unnecessary.

The Shaughnessy playoff series will open Saturday, Sept. 14, with Frostburg meeting Midland at Midland and Keyser tangling with Cumberland here. On Sunday, Sept. 15, Midland will play Frostburg at Frostburg and Cumberland will go to Keyser for a game.

If a third game is necessary it will be played Saturday, Sept. 21.

The finals will take place with the two survivors meeting on Sunday, Sept. 22.

Johnny Welch Former Major League Pitcher Dies in St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 3 (AP)—Johnny Vernon Welch, 33, former pitcher with the Boston Red Sox, Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs, died in a hospital here today. He had been ill two years.

Welch was with the Cubs from 1925-1928, later playing four years with the Red Sox and his last season, 1936, with Pittsburgh.

40,000 Expected To See Pro Giants Play Collegiates

Eastern All-Stars Composed of Unsung Gridiron Heroes

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP) — The "star-less" Eastern All-star football squad — a collection of gridders selected for ability rather than headlines — and the New York Pro Giants, who have never lost to one of these "hand-picked" teams, tangle in the Polo Grounds tomorrow night.

They meet before an expected crowd of 40,000 or more in the fifth annual game for the New York Herald Tribune fresh air fund.

The All-Stars, although underdogs in the betting, represent the strongest squad the Giants, Eastern champions of the National Pro League, have had to face in this annual contest. Although ten of the eleven probable starters go from tomorrow's tussle direct to National League teams, less than half ever cut any kind of a figure in the national gridiron picture during their collegiate careers.

On the other hand, the Giants take into the game the same line, sparked by All-League Mel Hein at center, which has been a standout in the league for years. Back of this forward wall, however, Steve Owen has shaken up his ball-carrying department and probably will start with Ward Cuff and his educated toe, Nello Falaschi, the ex-Santa Clara ace, Hank Soar and Len (Feets) Barnum. All but Falaschi, who joined the Giants a year ago, are veterans.

Tuss McLaughry, the Brown University coach and pilot of the Stars, still is undecided as to just which of his backs will start. His son, John, who played under Tuss at Brown, probably will handle the fullback chores, and Merl Condit, Carnegie Tech's forward passing star, will be at one of the halfback slots. The other posts probably will be decided from among Ben Kish of Pitt, Jerry Aananis of Boston College and a couple of huskies from the "small-college" ranks of Pennsylvania, John Rogalla of Scranton and Walt Strosser, of left-handed passer from St. Vincent. Ed Boell, New York U.'s fine passer, and Ronnie Cahill of Holy Cross, are sure to see considerable action later.

Heading the line squad is big Ed Kolman, from Temple, who was played for all but a few minutes when the All-Stars took on the Green Bay Packers last week.

Mason-Dixon Women's Golf Tourney Opens

Virginia Guilfoyle, Defending Titleholder, Beats Edith Miller 10 and 8

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 3 (AP) — A couldn't-be-bettered 10 and 8 victory started Virginia Guilfoil well on her way in defense of her Mason-Dixon women's golf title today as the opening of match play saw one veteran contender eliminated.

Miss Guilfoil, of Syracuse, N. Y., whose 81 in yesterday's qualifying round made her the 1940 medalist, won ten straight holes from Edith Miller of Washington, D. C., in her first round match.

Betty Meckley of Washington, often one of the strong contenders in the fall classic, won hard luck honors for the day when she bowed to Mrs. R. J. Paisley of Lakewood, O., one up on the 19th.

Mrs. Paisley qualified yesterday with a 103 to Miss Meckley's 89 but the Washington player found herself entirely off her game today. Her tee shots went into the rough and on eight holes she needed three putts.

Mary Morrison of Hershey, Pa., protege of Henry Picard, ran into unexpected opposition from Lois Rogers of Parkersburg and barely pulled out with a one-up decision. With Miss Morrison four up and five to go, Miss Rogers won four straight to even the match. Miss Morrison took the 18th, however, to win.

Other first round results in the championship flight:

Claire Doran, Cleveland, O., defeated Mrs. S. N. Huffard, Bluefield, 5 and 4; Mrs. E. W. Reese, Cincinnati, defeated Mrs. G. S. Case, Cleveland, 2 and 1; Betty Abernathy, Pittsburgh, Pa., easily defeated Mrs. George R. Hedges, Columbus, O., 7 and 6; Mrs. Jerome Sloman, Baltimore, defeated Mrs. H. B. Harsch, Cleveland, 7 and 8; Mrs. H. A. Neeb, Pittsburgh, defeated Mrs. R. F. Reid, Cleveland, 2 and 1.

Mrs. Ann Hoblitzell, Parkersburg, defeated Martha Green, Portsmouth, O., 5 and 4; Mrs. S. J. Heim, Kane, Pa., defeated Mrs. David Beaty, Warren, Pa., 5 and 4; Mrs. John O. Tucker, Wheeling, defeated Mrs. E. M. Tasker, Toledo, O., 2 and 1; Katherine McCloskey, Pittsburgh, defeated Mrs. Harold Banghart, Warren, Pa., 5 and 3; Joanne Yost, Harrisburg, Pa., defeated Mrs. Herbert Henderson, Pittsburgh, 7 and 6; Dorothy Gardner, Steubenville, O., defeated Mrs. F. C. Schlundt, Rocky River, O., 8 and 7.

Miss Gardner in her victory had a first round par 39, the first in the tournament.

Crystal Park Beats Hick's Aces 4 to 2

Crystal Park defeated Hick's Aces for the first time this season on the Rolling Mill diamond, 4 to 2. Calhoun pitched a fine game for the Parkers, having excellent support with only one error. Moore's homer on an error, with two men on was the clincher of the game. Yates and Page scored Hick's two runs.

Reds Gain Ground with 4-3 Win over Cards

Oldtimer, Jimmy Wilson, Delivers Timely Double in Eighth

CINCINNATI, Sept. 3 (AP)—Forty-year old Jimmy Wilson, sometime manager, coach and catcher, who has a son nearly ready for pro baseball, batted the Reds to a 4-3 victory over St. Louis today to send them eight full games ahead of idle Brooklyn in the National League pennant race.

The champions' 11th triumph in 15 starts was also fireman Joe Beggs' ninth in a relief role, and dropped the Cards to a third-place tie with Pittsburgh.

Jimmy got his chance in the eighth and turned in his second double since returning to active duty yesterday as sub for the injured Ernie Lombardi.

Beggs, credited with the Reds' 32nd one-run victory, really turned on the hose when he relieved Witt Guise, a portside knuckler just up from Columbia of the Sally League in the seventh period.

Witt, who otherwise pitched effective ball, gave up three dinky singles to load the bases in the seventh, walked one run across on four pitches and had thrown two balls to Mickey Owen when Beggs came on.

The former Yank Farm-hand persuaded Mickey to put out a double play ball to Lonnie Frey and the threat was over.

Bi-State League Shaughnessy Series To Start Next Week

A meeting of the Bi-State League officials and club representatives was held last night at the Clary Club and arrangements were completed for the playoffs.

Representatives of the Westvaco team notified the league that lack of players made it necessary for them to drop out of the playoffs. Westvaco had finished third in the regular season's play.

A toss for playoff positions was taken by Midland and Cumberland with Midland winning. These two teams finished in a tie for fourth place in the league. Westvaco's withdrawal made a playoff for the fourth position unnecessary.

The Shaughnessy playoff series will open Saturday, Sept. 14, with Frostburg meeting Midland at Midland and Keyser tangling with Cumberland here. On Sunday, Sept. 15, Midland will play Frostburg at Frostburg and Cumberland will go to Keyser for a game.

If a third game is necessary it will be played Saturday, Sept. 21.

The finals will take place with the two survivors meeting on Sunday, Sept. 22.

Johnny Welch Former Major League Pitcher Dies in St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 3 (AP)—Johnny Vernon Welch, 33, former pitcher with the Boston Red Sox, Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs, died in a hospital here today. He had been ill two years.

Welch was with the Cubs from 1925-1928, later playing four years with the Red Sox and his last season, 1936, with Pittsburgh.

40,000 Expected To See Pro Giants Play Collegiates

Eastern All-Stars Composed of Unsung Gridiron Heroes

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (AP) — The "star-less" Eastern All-star football squad — a collection of gridders selected for ability rather than headlines — and the New York Pro Giants, who have never lost to one of these "hand-picked" teams, tangle in the Polo Grounds tomorrow night.

They meet before an expected crowd of 40,000 or more in the fifth annual game for the New York Herald Tribune fresh air fund.

The All-Stars, although underdogs in the betting, represent the strongest squad the Giants, Eastern champions of the National Pro League, have had to face in this annual contest. Although ten of the eleven probable starters go from tomorrow's tussle direct to National League teams, less than half ever cut any kind of a figure in the national gridiron picture during their collegiate careers.

On the other hand, the Giants take into the game the same line, sparked by All-League Mel Hein at center, which has been a standout in the league for years. Back of this forward wall, however, Steve Owen has shaken up his ball-carrying department and probably will start with Ward Cuff and his educated toe, Nello Falaschi, the ex-Santa Clara ace, Hank Soar and Len (Feets) Barnum. All but Falaschi, who joined the Giants a year ago, are veterans.

Tuss McLaughry, the Brown University coach and pilot of the Stars, still is undecided as to just which of his backs will start. His son, John, who played under Tuss at Brown, probably will handle the fullback chores, and Meri Condit, Carnegie Tech's forward passing star, will be at one of the halfback slots. The other posts probably will be decided from among Ben Kish of Pitt, Jerry Aananis of Boston College and a couple of huskies from the "small-college" ranks of Pennsylvania. John Rogalla of Scranton and Walt Strosser, of left-handed passer from St. Vincent. Ed Boell, New York U.'s fine passer, and Ronnie Cahill of Holy Cross, are sure to see considerable action later.

Heading the line squad is big Ed Kolman, from Temple, who was played for all but a few minutes when the All-Stars took on the Green Bay Packers last week.

Kellys Beat Sure Stops

The Kellys defeated the Sure Stops 10-5 in the first game in two weeks, as the Kelly Springfield Tire Company league resumed activities after being idle due to bad weather.

Twigg pitched for the losers allowing 10 hits. Armbruster pitched for the winners allowing six hits.

Mason-Dixon Women's Golf Tourney Opens

Virginia Guilfoyle, Defending Titleholder, Beats Edith Miller 10 and 8

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 3 (AP) — A couldn't-be-bettered 10 and 8 victory started Virginia Guilfoil well on her way in defense of her Mason-Dixon women's golf title today as the opening of match play saw one veteran contender eliminated.

Miss Guilfoil, of Syracuse, N. Y., whose 81 in yesterday's qualifying round made her the 1940 medalist, won ten straight holes from Edith Miller of Washington, D. C., in her first round match.

Betty Meckley of Washington, often one of the strong contenders in the fall classic, won hard luck honors for the day when she bowed to Mrs. R. J. Paisley of Lakewood, O., one up on the 19th.

Mrs. Paisley qualified yesterday with a 103 to Miss Meckley's 89 but the Washington player found herself entirely off her game today. Her tee shots went into the rough and on eight holes she needed three putts.

Mary Morrison of Hershey, Pa., protege of Henry Picard, ran into unexpected opposition from Lois Rogers of Parkersburg and barely pulled out with a one-up decision. With Miss Morrison four up and five to go, Miss Rogers won four straight to even the match. Miss Morrison took the 18th, however, to win.

Other first round results in the championship flight:

Claire Doran, Cleveland, O., defeated Mrs. S. N. Huffard, Bluefield, 5 and 4; Mrs. E. W. Reese, Cincinnati, defeated Mrs. G. S. Case, Cleveland, 2 and 1; Betty Abernathy, Pittsburgh, Pa., easily defeated Mrs. George R. Hedges, Columbus, O., 7 and 6; Mrs. Jerome Sloman, Baltimore, defeated Mrs. H. B. Harsch, Cleveland, 7 and 8; Mrs. H. A. Neeb, Pittsburgh, defeated Mrs. R. F. Reid, Cleveland, 2 and 1.

Mrs. Ann Hoblitzell, Parkersburg, defeated Martha Green, Portsmouth, O., 5 and 4; Mrs. S. J. Heim, Kane, Pa., defeated Mrs. David Beaty, Warren, Pa., 5 and 4; Mrs. John O. Tucker, Wheeling, defeated Mrs. E. M. Tasker, Toledo, O., 2 and 1; Katherine McCloskey, Pittsburgh, defeated Mrs. Harold Banghart, Warren, Pa., 5 and 3; Joanne Yost, Harrisburg, Pa., defeated Mrs. Herbert Henderson, Pittsburgh, 7 and 6; Dorothy Gardner, Steubenville, O., defeated Mrs. F. C. Schlundt, Rocky River, O., 8 and 7.

Miss Gardner in her victory had a first round par 39, the first in the tournament.

FACTS for FANS

For those fans who are curious, Babe Ruth made more money out of baseball than Ty Cobb, but the latter is rated in the millionaire class because of investments. However, an annuity has the Babe settin' pretty.

Crystal Park Beats Hick's Aces 4 to 2

Crystal Park defeated Hick's Aces for the first time this season on the Rolling Mill diamond, 4 to 2. Calhoun pitched a fine game for the Parkers, having excellent support with only one error. Moore's homer on an error, with two men on was the clincher of the game. Yates and Page scored Hick's two runs.

Textile Union Meets Tonight At Fort Hill

Contract Ends Tomorrow; Unionists Rush To Pay Up Dues

James A. Dundon, president of Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, last night issued a call for a special meeting of the membership to be held tonight at 8 p. m., at the Fort Hill high school auditorium.

The announcement came following a full day and evening of negotiations between the Celanese management and the negotiating committee of Local 1874. No official statement was issued last night.

Emil Rieve, national president of the Textile Workers Union of America, and Herbert W. Payne, director of the union's rayon division, attended the meetings yesterday and last night.

Mr. Rieve's appearance was his first during the long drawnout negotiations between the parties involved whose agreement expires tomorrow.

Others present at yesterday's negotiations were James Hurley and J. W. Post, both from the conciliation service of the United States Department of Labor, and John W. Pohlhaus, commissioner of labor and statistics for Maryland.

Admission to tonight's meeting at Fort Hill high school will be by membership card only. Five cashiers were kept busy yesterday afternoon and last night at union headquarters on North Mechanic street as members flocked in to pay up their dues.

Dundon said last night that another meeting for night shift workers will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 a. m. at Textile Union headquarters, 34 North Mechanic street.

Store Manager Hurt As Car Turns Over

Ralph G. James Reported Recovering at the Allegany Hospital

An unusually quiet Labor Day, with no serious accidents reported, was observed in Cumberland, according to police and hospital attendants.

One of three persons injured was Ralph G. James, 28, of 805 Washington street. He suffered severe cuts and bruises Monday morning when his car careened from the Christie road and overturned.

James, who said he was enroute to a nearby farm for some horseback riding when the mishap occurred, was admitted to Allegany hospital for observation. He was reported "recovering" last night. He is manager of the G. C. Murphy Company store, Baltimore street.

William Turner, 17, of Frostburg, suffered an injured right arm when it was caught between the car in which he was riding and the open door of a parked machine at Petersburg, W. Va. He was riding with his uncle and had his arm out the window.

Young Turner was treated at Memorial hospital and discharged.

John Trochak, 15, of 457 North Centre street, was taken to Allegany hospital Monday after a long wooden splinter went through his left foot at home. He was released after being treated.

Youth Gets Nine Months' Sentence to Maryland House of Correction

Nine months in the Maryland House of Correction was the sentence meted out yesterday in trial magistrates court to a 22-year-old ex-convict after he pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny.

Richard Kerns, 9 Laing avenue, was given the jail term for stealing 188 pounds of brass and copper, valued at $15, from B & O. Railroad property.

Officer Ross H. Goshorn, of the railroad police, said Kerns committed two thefts in one day.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., who presided at the hearing, reported that Kerns was sentenced to three years in prison on a charge of breaking and entering in 1937. Kerns completed the term last April 23, he said.

Gateway Chatter

by News Staff Members

This column hopes the red-jacketed young lady who pranced into the News city room last night found what she was after, namely, a Roosevelt campaign button.

"They're as scarce as hen's teeth," she wailed in announcing that her obtaining the button was of vital importance. Asked if she was about to address a Young Men's Democratic club, she said, no, she was on a scavenger hunt.

A News reporter referred the young lady to Col. George Henderson, Lewis M. Wilson, Phil Roman and Mayor Harry Irvine. The reporter said all four would be likely to have Roosevelt buttons by the bucket-full but in the event they were fresh out to try Clerk of Courts Robert Jackson.

—o—

That a real spirit of unity exists among the people of America in the present defense emergency was emphasized by Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, First regimental officer of the Maryland National Guard, in his talk yesterday before the local Rotary club on the recent army maneuvers near Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Franklin is a native Alabaman. Looking back into history, he said, one might suppose there is a difference between the hospitality of northern and southern folk. But the guardsmen from south of the Mason and Dixon line found the people of New York state exceedingly hospitable while the army games were in progress, he said.

"In fact, Dr. Franklin added, "about the only difference we noted between the people of northern New York state and those south of the big line, with respect to hospitality, was that up north they say "You guys" and down south they say "You all."

—o—

A reporter who possibly has more curosity than sense yesterday essayed to find out why so many young folks are getting married these days.

A total of 496 couples took out marriage licenses last month at the court house. Forty more got their licenses yesterday. Thirty-three applied for them.

Most of the young couples who march into the clerk of court's office appear to be alert, intelligent specimens. Most of them are between 20 and 30, some younger. While some of them seem a little shy and overwhelmed by it all, it must be admitted the great majority make their applications in a most business-like manner.

Extremely curious, the reporter sidled up to one clean-cut applicant yesterday while his bride-to-be was off someplace powdering her nose. After exchanging some small talk on the court house steps the reporter bluntly asked the young chap why he was getting married . . . and prepared to duck if necessary.

"Of course it's none of your damned business," the young fellow replied pleasantly, "and what you really mean is if I'm getting married to avoid the draft.

"Well, I'll admit that has something to do with it. Of course, I've been planning to get married for some time but have been putting it off until we had a little more money. But in view of the situation, what's the use of waiting? I've got a good job. If I get married I'll have a better chance to keep it."

"I've been planning this a long time. I don't want to see everything go haywire if I can help it. Suppose I'm gone a year, probably more if they get me, and give up my job. A lot of things can happen in a year. And I don't put much stock in this stuff about getting my job back, either.

Told he had a very realistic approach to the situation, he promptly replied, "Certainly, I have" and offered no apology.

He seemed like a very frank, honest young man. And he had a very pretty girl, too.

Attempt To Break Will Dismissed By Judge Huster

But Beneficiary Is Ordered To Pay Burial and Court Costs

An attempt to break the will of the late William P. Ryan was dismissed yesterday by Associate Judge William A. Huster who ordered, however, that the beneficiary pay the undertaker's bill and the costs of the proceedings in Circuit Court.

Judge Huster's opinion was handed down in the case of Nora G. Swan and Betty B. and Joseph A. Ryan versus Susie Whittaker who cared for the 76-year-old Mexico Farms man prior to his death on May 14.

The petitioners charged that the late Mr. Ryan was incapable of transacting any business prior to his death and that misrepresentation and undue coercion was used in persuading him to sign over his estate to Susie Whittaker.

Testimony Examined

Judge Huster's decision was announced after examing testimony by a long list of witnesses who testified regarding Mr. Ryan's mental and physical condition prior to his death.

It was noted by Judge Huster that "all the witnesses for the plaintiff are interested parties except Dr. Thomas W. Koon and Dr. L. J. Lanick. However, the defendant produced a large number of disinterested witnesses who observed little change in William P. Ryan's mental condition for several years.

"The weight of the testimony is that William P. Ryan was capable of executing a valid deed or contract on Nov. 28, 1939, and that he was not under any duress and that there is no evidence of fraud," Judge Huster continued.

Many Witnesses

"However, the court feels that Susie Whittaker should pay the undertaker's bill for the burial of William P. Ryan and also the costs of the proceedings. The bill of complaint will be dismissed upon the said Susie Whittaker, defendant, paying the amount of the undertaker's bill in the burial of William P. Ryan to the person or persons who have paid said bill," the court concluded.

Witnesses who testified included Doctors Koon and Lanick, Nora J. Swan, Charlie Ryan, Lula M. Shanholtz and Joseph Ryan, for the plaintiffs, and Douglas Parker, George and Mattie Shoemaker, J. W. and Mary F. Shank, James Crites, Ethel Walker, James Brehm, Elmer Bierman, Charles Falk, Melvin Brehm, F. Brooke Whiting, and Doctors George P. Paulman and M. E. B. Owens for the defendant.

Johnstown Man Jailed On Motor Law Charges

A Johnstown, Pa., man who told police he was an Army captain was lodged in the city jail last night on charges of violating two state motor laws.

The man gave his name as Lloyd D. Barnes when arrested on Henderson avenue by Officer John E. Sherry, who hailed a passing Ohio car and chased him from Baltimore street.

Officer Sherry said he warned Barnes not to drive his machine because of the condition he was in, but the man failed to heed his advice. Barnes nearly struck several pedestrians while driving, he said.

According to Officer Sherry, Barnes told him he wasn't going to drive his car, but did so while he was busy elsewhere. Officer Sherry drove Barnes to headquarters after curbing his machine.

Barnes is scheduled to be given a hearing today in trial magistrates court.

Baltimorean To Speak At Baptist Meeting

Miss Caroline Henderson, of Baltimore, will be principal speaker at a meeting of Baptist church representatives from throughout Allegany county Thursday at 7:30 p. m., at the First Baptist church, Bedford street.

Miss Henderson, of the State Adult Sunday School Workers' Department of the Maryland Baptist Union Association, will discuss final plans with representatives of Baptist churches participating in a county-wide survey and enlargement campaign which begins Sunday.

WONDERS NEVER CEASE—The little black kitten "Lightning" shown above with "Cotton," a sixteen-months-old female dog, was saved from starvation when the dog found it on a neighborhood street and "adopted" the forlorn bit of life. Alice Cline, 422 North Mechanic street, is the owner of both dog and cat and is shown, lounging in the yard with her prize pets.

Police Boys' Club Members Enjoying Camp Activities

Fifty-five Youngsters Enrolled; Track Meet Is Highlight

Fifty-five boys, members of the Police Boys' club, are having the time of their lives at the Central Y.M.C.A. camp on the South Branch, near Springfield, W. Va.

From the time they get up at 7:30 a. m., until Taps blows at 9:30 p. m., they are busy at some form of activity. Swimming, softball, canoeing, tetherball, basketball and ping pong are some of the sports that keep the boys on the go all day long. And the meals, man how they stow away the "eats" when mess call sounds. Campers' games at dark and the story and group singing around the campfire end a day filled with action. During a recent afternoon a majority of the boys took part in a track meet, five different groups participating. High scoring honors went to Richard Brotemarkle who totaled seventeen points in Class B. In Class A, Walter Basilo led with fifteen points. Class C Walter Brant with fourteen points, Class D, Richard Buckalew with fifteen points and Class E, Glenn Brant with thirteen points. Results:

Federal Warden To Speak At Teachers' Meeting

William A. Gunter To Give Opening Address Today at Allegany High

Edgar M. Gerlach, warden at the Federal Correctional Institution, Danbury, Conn., will be the principal speaker today at the meeting of the Allegany County Teachers' Association, at the Allegany county high school auditorium, at 10:30 a. m.

Mr. Gerlach's subject will be "The Right To Be Heard, Bad Boy, What Now?"

State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris, Judge Elizabeth R. Menefee, of Juvenile court; Frank M. Perdew and Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., of trial magistrate's court and directors of the Cumberland Police Boys' club, are invited to attend.

The teachers' meeting which precedes by one day the opening of the full term of public high schools in Allegany county, will get under way at 10 a. m., at which time William A. Gunter, president of the board of education, will deliver a brief address of welcome. Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of schools, will make a statement on school policies for the year and other announcemets.

Following Warden Gerlach's address, luncheon will be served at 11:30 a. m.

The afternoon session will get under way at 12:30 and will consist of the following program:

School Groups To Meet

Departmental meeting of the high school group under the supervision of Richard T. Rizer.

Address by James E. Spitznas, state supervisor, on "High Schools Must Change."

The Music Teachers group meeting will be in charge of Miss Dorothy Willison.

Following the regular teachers' meeting the teachers will hold faculty sessions with the principals of their respective schools either in their home schools or at Allegany high school.

Schools Open Tomorrow

All public schools of the county will open at 9 a. m., tomorrow. Superintendent Kopp urges all parents to send their children to school on the first day and the opening day is considered one of great importance to the pupil.

Mr. Kopp estimated that the enrollment for county schools this fall will be 16,500, which represents twenty per cent of the county's population. Four hundred and seventy-five teachers will be employed.

Youths To Get Hearing On Charge of Taking Motor Vehicle

The youths were held last night in the city jail pending a hearing today in trial magistrates court on a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

They gave their names as Paul Brant, 18, of RFD 4, Cumberland, and Paul Hayden, 16, of 213 Cecelia street, when booked at headquarters Monday afternoon. They are accused of taking the car of Avery Chedester, of Valley road, from North Mechanic street Saturday night.

Ernest Duckworth, special policeman at Constitution Park, apprehended the youths on Williams road after receviing a tip that they had the stolen machine.

Pupils from East Side, Gephart, Columbia street and Centre street, who were promoted to the seventh grade and who live in the Fort Hill district will attend Fort Hill high school, Mr. Kopp said.

Seven Drivers Fined for Motor Law Violations

Three Acquitted as Trial Magistrates' Court Has Busy Day

Motor vehicle cases galore kept attaches of trial magistrate court as busy as a swarm of bees, yesterday.

Seven drivers were found guilty and three others were acquitted of state charges by Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., and Frank A. Perdew.

Clarence E. Barrow, 318 Maryland avenue, was found not guilty of drunken driving, but was fined $5 and costs on a charge of reckless driving. He was arrested Sunday on Baltimore street by Officers B. F. Hotchkiss and J. H. Newhouse.

Charles F. Swarner, 628 Lincoln street, paid $5 and costs for reckless driving, while Harry R. Small, of Washington, D. C., was acquitted of the same charge.

Arrest Follows Collision

Officers F. O. Daum and Newhouse arrested both drivers following a collision on Greene street, Sunday. Several persons were injured in the accident.

James V. Canonico, of Meyersdale, Pa., forfeited bond totaling $22.90 on charges of failing to keep to the right-center of the road and speeding at LaVale.

One hundred buses will be used daily to transport children to and from the schools throughout Allegany county this year, Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of schools, anounces.

In addition to eighty-six private buses there will be four C. &W., two Mt. Savage, two Ellerslie and seven Potomac Edison company buses in service during the school term.

Superintendent Kopp said that 4,400 children will be transported over the various routes. He estimated that a million and a quarter children will have been transported to and from the county schools at the close of the school term next June.

Cresaptown Man Is Held for Jury On Still Charge

Albert Lease Is Committed to Jail in Default of $500 Bond

A 46-year-old Cresaptown man was ordered held under $500 bond to await action of the October grand jury when arraigned yesterday in trial magistrates court on a charge of illicit possession and manufacture of liquor.

The man, Albert Lease, waived a hearing and was committed to the county jail in default of bond. He was arrested Monday night after state police raided a small still laong Warrior Run, one-half mile off the Brant road.

Corporal H. F. Schultheis, state police, reported that fifteen gallons of whiskey were confiscated in the raid.

County Investigator Terrance J. Boyle, who preferred the charge, said Lease admitted ownership of the still and liquor.

Piedmont Bridge Plans Received

Contract for $20,000 Job To Be Let as Soon as Possible

After waiting two months, the State Roads Commission of West Virginia yesterday submitted the plans and specifications for the new Piedmont interstate bridge to the county commissioners.

The go-ahead sign for the $20,000 bridge now only needs the official O. K. of the county board. The commissioners play to have the work started as soon as the contract is let.

The bridge connecting Piedmont and Luke, will cost the State of West Virginia approximately $10,000 and Allegany county $10,000, court house attaches said yesterday.

Maj. Franklin Gives Sidelights On Recent First Army Maneuvers

Rotarians To Honor Guard Officers Tomorrow at Cardinal Club

Sidelights, both interesting and amusing, of the recent First army maneuvers near Ogdensburg, N. Y., of which the First regiment of the Maryland National Guard was a part, were related in a talk before the local Rotary club yesterday at the Fort Cumberland hotel by Maj. Joseph P. Franklin, city-county health officer and past president of the club.

The army maneuvered over a terrain of approximately 600 square miles, Franklin said. Some 90,000 guardsmen, reservists and army officers took part, this being the largest of the four army war games held this summer.

People of the Ogdensburg section were quite hospitable and co-operative during the games, despite inconveniences caused them, Franklin said.

Plans were furthered at the meeting for a session of club members Thursday afternoon and evening at the Cardinal club, twenty miles east of Cumberland on the Oldtown road just this side of Town Creek bridge. This event has been arranged in honor of Col. George Henderson and Maj. Franklin, who as guard officers will be called into active service October 15.

The affair will start at 3 o'clock and will continue "from then on," according to announcement by Roy W. Eves, club president. It will be a stag affair with a buffet supper, refreshments, horseshoe pitching, shooting, swimming, boating, checkers, chess, cards, billiards, fireside rockers and other features.

Medical Examiner Reaffirms Verdict in James Lewis Case

Burns on Body Discounted; Death Reported Due to Natural Causes

Dr. Linne H. Corson yesterday reaffirmed his verdict of death due to natural causes in the case of James R. Lewis, 40-year-old Cumberland cobbler, found dead Sunday in a clump of weeds at the rear of the old silk mill on Gay street.

Considerable speculation ensued yesterday when City Commissioner Thomas F. Conlon reported that an employe of the Hafer funeral home reported the presence of several steam burns on the victim's body. The right eye and both arms were apparently affected, it was reported.

While Dr. Corson noted the peculiar marks Sunday in examining the body, he attributed the raw spots to the body's having been exposed to the elements.

Police rounded up several associates of Lewis' Monday and yesterday but questioning revealed no answer to the peculiar raw spots on the victim's body.

Explaining the matter, Dr. Corson said it is possible the marks were caused by Lewis' having spilled moonshine liquor on himself prior to his death. His clothing was not burned, it was noted.

The burns were not serious enough to have caused death, Dr. Corson said. No marks of violence were found on the body, he said.

In upholding his verdict, Dr. Corson said the victim had been known to complain of heart trouble in the past. He had also used intoxicants heavily at times, the medical examiner reported.

In view of these facts and the absence of any marks of violence, Dr. Corson said he had no alternative but to render a verdict of death due to natural causes.

Asked if he had the authority to perform an autopsy in such cases if deemed advisable, Dr. Corson said the authority for such a move would emanate from the state's attorney's office. An autopsy costs $50 if performed by a local man and $75 if performed by a Baltimore medical examiner, Dr. Corson said.

Textile Union Meets Tonight At Fort Hill

Contract Ends Tomorrow; Unionists Rush To Pay Up Dues

James A. Dundon, president of Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, last night issued a call for a special meeting of the membership to be held tonight at 8 p. m., at the Fort Hill high school auditorium.

The announcement came following a full day and evening of negotiations between the Celanese management and the negotiating committee of Local 1874. No official statement was issued last night.

Emil Rieve, national president of the Textile Workers Union of America, and Herbert W. Payne, director of the union's rayon division, attended the meetings yesterday and last night.

Mr. Rieve's appearance was his first during the long drawnout negotiations between the parties involved whose agreement expires tomorrow.

Others present at yesterday's negotiations were James Hurley and J. W. Post, both from the conciliation service of the United States Department of Labor, and John W. Pohlhaus, commissioner of labor and statistics for Maryland.

Admission to tonight's meeting at Fort Hill high school will be by membership card only. Five cashiers were kept busy yesterday afternoon and last night at union headquarters on North Mechanic street as members flocked in to pay up their dues.

Dundon said last night that another meeting for night shift workers will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 a. m. at Textile Union headquarters, 34 North Mechanic street.

Store Manager Hurt As Car Turns Over

Ralph G. James Reported Recovering at the Allegany Hospital

An unusually quiet Labor Day, with no serious accidents reported, was observed in Cumberland, according to police and hospital attendants.

One of three persons injured was Ralph G. James, 28, of 805 Washington street. He suffered severe cuts and bruises Monday morning when his car careened from the Christie road and overturned.

James, who said he was enroute to a nearby farm for some horseback riding when the mishap occurred, was admitted to Allegany hospital for observation. He was reported "recovering" last night. He is manager of the G. C. Murphy Company store, Baltimore street.

William Turner, 17, of Frostburg, suffered an injured right arm when it was caught between the car in which he was riding and the open door of a parked machine at Petersburg, W. Va. He was riding with his uncle and had his arm out the window.

Young Turner was treated at Memorial hospital and discharged.

Youth Gets Nine Months' Sentence to Maryland House of Correction

Nine months in the Maryland House of Correction was the sentence meted out yesterday in trial magistrates court to a 22-year-old ex-convict after he pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny.

Richard Kerns, 9 Laing avenue, was given the jail term for stealing 188 pounds of brass and copper, valued at $15, from B & O. Railroad property.

Officer Ross H. Goshorn, of the railroad police, said Kerns committed two thefts in one day.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., who presided at the hearing, reported that Kerns was sentenced to three years in prison on a charge of breaking and entering in 1937 Kerns completed the term last April 23, he said.

This column hopes the red-jacketed young lady who pranced into the News city room last night found what she was after, namely, a Roosevelt campaign button.

"They're as scarce as hen's teeth," she wailed in announcing that her obtaining the button was of vital importance. Asked if she was about to address a Young Men's Democratic club, she said, no, she was on a scavenger hunt.

A News reporter referred the young lady to Col. George Henderson, Lewis M. Wilson, Phil Roman and Mayor Harry Irvine. The reporter said all four would be likely to have Roosevelt buttons by the bucket-full but in the event they were fresh out to try Clerk of Courts Robert Jackson.

That a real spirit of unity exists among the people of America in the present defense emergency was emphasized by Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, First regimental officer of the Maryland National Guard, in his talk yesterday before the local Rotary club on the recent army maneuvers near Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Franklin is a native Alabaman. Looking back into history, he said, one might suppose there is a difference between the hospitality of northern and southern folk. But the guardsmen from south of the Mason and Dixon line found the people of New York state exceedingly hospitable while the army games were in progress, he said.

"In fact, Dr. Franklin added, "about the only difference we noted between the people of northern New York state and those south of the big line, with respect to hospitality, was that up north they say "You guys" and down south they say "You all."

—o—

A reporter who possibly has more curosity than sense yesterday essayed to find out why so many young folks are getting married these days.

A total of 496 couples took out marriage licenses last month at the court house. Forty more got their licenses yesterday. Thirty-three applied for them.

Most of the young couples who march into the clerk of court's office appear to be alert, intelligent specimens. Most of them are between 20 and 30, some younger. While some of them seem a little shy and overwhelmed by it all, it must be admitted the great majority make their applications in a most business-like manner.

Extremely curious, the reporter sidled up to one clean-cut applicant yesterday while his bride-to-be was off someplace powdering her nose. After exchanging some small talk on the court house steps the reporter bluntly asked the young chap why he was getting married . . . and prepared to duck if necessary.

"Of course it's none of your damned business," the young fellow replied pleasantly, "and what you really mean is if I'm getting married to avoid the draft.

"Well, I'll admit that has something to do with it. Of course, I've been planning to get married for some time but have been putting it off until we had a little more money. But in view of the situation, what's the use of waiting? I've got a good job. If I get married I'll have a better chance to keep it."

"I've been planning this a long time. I don't want to see everything go haywire if I can help it. Suppose I'm gone a year, probably more if they get me, and give up my job. A lot of things can happen in a year. And I don't put much stock in this stuff about getting my job back, either.

Told he had a very realistic approach to the situation, he promptly replied, "Certainly, I have" and offered no apology.

He seemed like a very frank, honest young man. And he had a very pretty girl, too.

Attempt To Break Will Dismissed By Judge Huster

But Beneficiary Is Ordered To Pay Burial and Court Costs

An attempt to break the will of the late William P. Ryan was dismissed yesterday by Associate Judge William A. Huster who ordered, however, that the beneficiary pay the undertaker's bill and the costs of the proceedings in Circuit Court.

Judge Huster's opinion was handed down in the case of Nora G. Swan and Betty B. and Joseph A. Ryan versus Susie Whittaker who cared for the 76-year-old Mexico Farms man prior to his death on May 14.

The petitioners charged that the late Mr. Ryan was incapable of transacting any business prior to his death and that misrepresentation and undue coercion was used in persuading him to sign over his estate to Susie Whittaker.

Testimony Examined

Judge Huster's decision was announced after examing testimony by a long list of witnesses who testified regarding Mr. Ryan's mental and physical condition prior to his death.

It was noted by Judge Huster that "all the witnesses for the plaintiff are interested parties except Dr. Thomas W. Koon and Dr. L. J. Lanick. However, the defendant produced a large number of disinterested witnesses who observed little change in William P. Ryan's mental condition for several years.

"The weight of the testimony is that William P. Ryan was capable of executing a valid deed or contract on Nov. 28, 1939, and that he was not under any duress and that there is no evidence of fraud," Judge Huster continued.

Many Witnesses

"However, the court feels that Susie Whittaker should pay the undertaker's bill for the burial of William P. Ryan and also the costs of the proceedings. The bill of complaint will be dismissed upon the said Susie Whittaker, defendant, paying the amount of the undertaker's bill in the burial of William P. Ryan to the person or persons who have paid said bill," the court concluded.

Witnesses who testified included Doctors Koon and Lanick, Nora J. Swan, Charlie Ryan, Lula M. Shanhoitz and Joseph Ryan, for the plaintiffs, and Douglas Parker, George and Mattie Shoemaker, J. W. and Mary F. Shank, James Crites, Ethel Walker, James Brehm, Elmer Bierman, Charles Falk, Melvin Brehm, F. Brooke Whiting, and Doctors George P. Paulman and M. E. B. Owens for the defendant.

Johnstown Man Jailed On Motor Law Charges

A Johnstown, Pa., man who told police he was an Army captain was lodged in the city jail last night on charges of violating two state motor laws.

The man gave his name as Lloyd D. Barnes when arrested on Henderson avenue by Officer John E. Sherry, who hailed a passing Ohio car and chased him from Baltimore street.

Officer Sherry said he warned Barnes not to drive his machine because of the condition he was in, but the man failed to heed his advice. Barnes nearly struck several pedestrians while driving, he said.

According to Officer Sherry, Barnes told him he wasn't going to drive his car, but did so while he was busy elsewhere. Officer Sherry drove Barnes to headquarters after curbing his machine.

Barnes is scheduled to be given a hearing today in trial magistrates court.

Baltimorean To Speak At Baptist Meeting

Miss Caroline Henderson, of Baltimore, will be principal speaker at a meeting of Baptist church representatives from throughout Allegany county Thursday at 7:30 p. m., at the First Baptist church, Bedford street.

Miss Henderson, of the State Adult Sunday School Workers' Department of the Maryland Baptist Union Association, will discuss final plans with representatives of Baptist churches participating in a county-wide survey and enlargement campaign which begins Sunday.

Police Boys' Club Members Enjoying Camp Activities

Fifty-five Youngsters Enrolled; Track Meet Is Highlight

Fifty-five boys, members of the Police Boys' club, are having the time of their lives at the Central Y.M.C.A. camp on the South Branch, near Springfield, W. Va.

From the time they get up at 7:30 a. m., until Taps blows at 9:30 p. m., they are busy at some form of activity. Swimming, softball, canoeing, tetherball, basketball and ping pong are some of the sports that keep the boys on the go all day long. And the meals, man how they stow away the "eats" when mess call sounds. Campers' games at dark and the story and group singing around the campfire end a day filled with action. During a recent afternoon a majority of the boys took part in a track meet, five different groups participating. High scoring honors went to Richard Brotemarkle who totaled seventeen points in Class B. Contract for $20,000 Job To Be Let as Soon as Possible

After waiting two months, the State Roads Commission of West Virginia yesterday submitted the plans and specifications for the new Piedmont interstate bridge to the county commissioners.

The go-ahead sign for the $20,000 bridge now only needs the official O. K. of the county board. The commissioners play to have the work started as soon as the contract is let.

The bridge connecting Piedmont and Luke, will cost the State of West Virginia approximately $10,000 and Allegany county $10,000, court house attaches said yesterday.

Eight Hundred Tourists Visited Headquarters Of George Washington

Records kept at Washington headquarters in Riverside Park show 843 tourists registered and visited at the historic little building during the summer. These visitors represented half the states in the Union, including Minnesota, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Massachusetts, Ohio, North Carolina, Florida, California, Illinois, Indiana, Arkansas, New York, Kansas, New Jersey, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Georgia, Michigan, Kentucky, Louisiana and the District of Columbia. There was also one visitor from New Brunswick, Canada.

George Washington Headquarters was opened for inspection this summer as a NYA project, sponsored and arranged by the Junior Association of Commerce.

Medical Examiner Reaffirms Verdict in James Lewis Case

Burns on Body Discounted; Death Reported Due to Natural Causes

Dr. Linne H. Corson yesterday reaffirmed his verdict of death due to natural causes in the case of James R. Lewis, 40-year-old Cumberland cobbler, found dead Sunday in a clump of weeds at the rear of the old silk mill on Gay street.

Considerable speculation ensued yesterday when City Commissioner Thomas F. Conlon reported that an employe of the Hafer funeral home reported the presence of several steam burns on the victim's body. The right eye and both arms were apparently affected, it was reported.

While Dr. Corson noted the peculiar marks Sunday in examining the body, he attributed the raw spots to the body's having been exposed to the elements.

Police rounded up several associates of Lewis' Monday and yesterday but questioning revealed no answer to the peculiar raw spots on the victim's body.

Explaining the matter, Dr. Corson said it is possible the marks were caused by Lewis' having spilled moonshine liquor on himself prior to his death. His clothing was not burned, it was noted.

The burns were not serious enough to have caused death, Dr. Corson said. No marks of violence were found on the body, he said.

In upholding his verdict, Dr. Corson said the victim had been known to complain of heart trouble in the past. He had also used intoxicants heavily at times, the medical examiner reported.

In view of these facts and the absence of any marks of violence, Dr. Corson said he had no alternative but to render a verdict of death due to natural causes.

Asked if he had the authority to perform an autopsy in such cases if deemed advisable, Dr. Corson said the authority for such a move would emanate from the state's attorney's office. An autopsy costs $50 if performed by a local man and $75 if performed by a Baltimore medical examiner, Dr. Corson said.

Smiths Capture Pigeon Premiums At State Fair

Local Exhibitors Receive Ninety-nine Awards and $149 Cash

Pigeons from the lofts of C. A. Smith and Son, LaVale, and Charles Smith, of 437 Walnut street, this week received ninety-nine premiums amounting to $149 in cash at the Maryland State Fair Pigeon Show at Timonium.

One hundred and five birds were entered by the Smiths in the largest show of its kind held annually in Maryland, and every bird was placed under ribbons.

Judges of the show were Elisha Hanson, of Bethesda, Md.; Henry Jaeger, of Baltimore, and J. Norman High of Finksburg.

The Smiths who enter their birds in at least fifteen shows throughout the country each year, received special Sweepstake Prizes of $1 each for Champion Muffed Tumblers, Champion Strausser and Champion Jacobin pigeons.

Among the many varieties exhibited by the Cumberland pigeon fanciers were: White pigmy pouted, black clean leg tumbler, white clean ueg tumbler, red clean leg tumbler, yellow clean leg tumbler, any color white side tumbler, rose wing or mottled tumbler, black boldheaded tumbler, blue baldhead tumbler, red or yellow tumbler, red or yellow jacobin, white jacobin, shields, A.O.C. Willkie Plans To Open Aggressive Campaign Soon

Meets Republican Leaders from Half the Nation Today

By WILLIAM B. ARDERY

RUSHVILLE, Ind., Sept. 4 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, said today "a definite step off into an aggressive, organized campaign" would result from tomorrow's conference with Republican organization leaders from half the nation.

"The object is to get the campaign under full steam," Willkie said. "The conference will be the formal start of an organized drive."

The nominee told reporters Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota and John Hamilton, executive director of the Republican National Committee, would be present. He said Chairman Joseph W. Martin of the national committee would be here if possible.

The meeting will give Willkie his busiest day in a week.

Willkie talked today with reporters in the ladies' dining room of the Elks' club after conferring with fifty-seven labor representatives from Michigan.

C. L. Daniels of Grand Rapids, spokesman for the group, said all were members of the labor division of the Republican State Committee. Leslie Butler of Lansing, Republican state chairman, said "two-thirds of these people here today undoubtedly voted for Roosevelt in 1936."

The Republican nominee said he was "enormously gratified that representatives of Michigan labor have come down to see me and to pledge their support wholeheartedly."

Three Destroyers Off for Canada

BOSTON, Sept. 4 (AP)—Three of the nation's "over-age" destroyers—the first of those destined for Great Britain in President Roosevelt's historic trade for western hemisphere naval and air bases—sailed from Boston harbor tonight, apparently bound for a Canadian port.

Despite navy department expectations that none of the destroyers would be ready to sail before Friday, the three ships were hurriedly painted and repaired by bustling crews throughout the day and set out before sunset.

Soon after 6:30 p. m. (EDT) the first of the three vessels reversed engines and backed out of its berth at the navy yard.

Her skeleton U. S. navy crew waving and cheering from the decks, the destroyer headed down Boston harbor toward the Atlantic.

Three minutes later the second ship moved into the harbor and the third set sail after a similar interval. They moved down the harbor in single file.

'Graft Broker' on Witness Stand; Accuses Ex-officials

DETROIT, Sept. 4 (AP)—A witness who called himself a "graft broker" for the police department and former Mayor Richard W. Reading, testified at an inquiry here today.

He received the money, Boettcher asserted, from handbooks, policy houses and police officers who paid from $3,500 apiece for promotions.

Testifying at an examination to determine if Reading and about 150 other defendants will be held for trial on a grand jury indictment accusing them of conspiring to protect illegal handbooks, Boettcher named the following recipients of the larger graft payments:

Former Mayor Reading, $50,500; Richard W. Reading, Jr., his son, about $18,000; Fred W. Frahm, former police superintendent, $26,000; Wendell A. Lochbiler, former district police inspector, $41,000; William J. Heidt, suspended county police superintendent, $32,000, and Fred R. Clark, former chief of police inspector, $12,000.

The witness said his main job while on the police force was to organize handbook and policy rackets to obtain the maximum amount of graft payments. Armed state troopers stood at either elbow while he testified.

Reading was defeated for re-election last year by Edward J. Jeffries.

Russia Calls Boys To the Colors

MOSCOW, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Soviet union called youths of 18, 19 and 20 today for duty with the colors beginning the middle of September to guard the nation at a time of "imperialist war" and "capitalist encirclement."

Older men whose compulsory training had been suspended, also were called.

At the same time, troops and junior officers of earlier classes who had completed their regular two-year period of military service were released and placed on the reserve list.

The newspaper Moscow Bolshevik thus described the purpose of the mobilizations:

"Our country, in the capitalist encirclement, stands like a lofty cliff amidst stormy seas.

"This obliges the Soviet and all its citizens to be fully armed."

GETTIN' POP'S UNIFORM READY

Frank J. Comiskey, Jr., 14, whose dad is a World War veteran is getting pop's uniform ready to answer President Roosevelt's call on the National Guard. Comiskey, Sr., 40 years old, will put in a year of service in the South with the 244th Coast Artillery.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By EDWARD E. BOMAR
Associated Press Staff Writer

The day's news hits world-wide repercussions from the trade of destroyers for naval bases, far beyond the prospective immediate effects on American and British defenses.

Warring and neutral capitals inevitably accept the deal as fresh evidence that the United States is determined at all costs that Britain must not lose.

From this interpretation flow effects on Europe, the far east, Latin America and elsewhere which already are making their appearance.

In his threat to "erase" Britain's cities by night bombing, Adolf Hitler refrained from any mention of his foe's latest reinforcements, but the development might well have influenced the decision whether to attempt invasion.

Time on Britain's Side

Logically, time now is even more on Britain's side. Under the terms of official announcements, the first of the fleet of fifty urgently needed warships will be in British hands in a few days; and the period of most favorable weather for air or sea offensives is fast nearing an end.

In the far east, a Hongkong dispatch reports without confirmation that a Japanese ultimatum to Indo-China has been withdrawn for the time being.

Linked or not with the British-American fait accompli, the report suggests that Tokyo is giving some anxious study to the documents in the case in the light of the Japanese campaign to set by force a new order in Asia.

Washington officials view the new arrangement with Great Britain as lessening the danger that the United States fleet may have to be speeded to the Atlantic in an emergency and thus remove from the Pacific a restraining influence on Japanese expanionist tendencies.

In Latin America, the acquisition of United States air and sea bases on and adjacent to the southern continent should remove some of the doubts in evidence at the recent Havana inter-American conference as to the effectiveness of joint hemisphere defense.

Effects Distant Nations

The latest American aid to Britain certainly can not be without effect on such distant parts of the world as Russia, Turkey and India, where evidences of empire strength or weakness are of profound importance.

In Moscow and Istanbul, as well as Tokyo, it is safe to assume that the jubilation in London is being carefully balanced against the official interpretation of the Axis that the tender of sites for bases involves a loss of John Bull's dignity, prestige and naval power and means that the British empire is breaking up.

German consulate has become more restrained. Too busy now with the evacuation of Rumanians to the old kingdom, civilians have no time to demonstrate against "the Vienna sentence."

From the northern mountains come recurrent reports of minor clashes of Hungarian and Rumanian peasants. Cigarettes are no longer available here. Sugar and flour have disappeared from stores. Public buildings have been stripped of furniture.

The average Hungarian minority member seemed far from satisfied with the German-Italian solution of the Transylvania problem.

"This was a presidential act of high statesmanship," Dr. Eddy continued.

"Contrast with this the lamentable obligation of Mr. Roosevelt (as candidate of his party) to fraternize with, flatter and employ the services of Mr. Kelly of Chicago and Mr. Hague of Jersey City to supply rousements and percussion at the party convention in Chicago."

Firemen Warned of Increase in Sabotage

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 4 (AP) — Maryland volunteer firemen were told today that the United States, by aiding Britain in war against Germany and Italy, "can be expected to have an increase in sabotage."

The speaker, Dr. Wilbert J. Huff, head of the University of Maryland Chemical Engineering School and U. S. Bureau of Mines official, said that because explosives are included in sabotage, firemen must deal with some of these cases.

Huff shared the afternoon program at the eleventh annual short course for firemen with Chief Harry K. Rogers of Chicago, who spoke on "Fire Fighting in Old Mexico."

Firemen were cautioned by Huff to "remember that explosives cannot be combatted with water because of their nitro-glycerin content."

In his talk on Mexico, Rogers explained fire-fighting methods in that country varied greatly in many respects as compared with this country because of the different building materials used.

Giving one illustration, Rogers said firemen could not play a stream of water on abode or clay houses because the force would knock the walls over.

J. Alfred Fisher of the Annapolis fire department spoke on "Oil Burner Hazards."

Pump, gas mask, ladder and hose evolutions were demonstrated to group sessions.

The four-day school ends Friday.

Baby Burns to Death in Home

BERLIN, Md. Sept. 4. (AP)—Shirley Eileen Josephs, eight month old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Josephs, was burned to death in a fire that destroyed their home today.

Chief W. M. Thompson of the Berlin volunteer fire department said the house was a mass of flames when firemen arrived. They were unable to put water on the blaze immediately because the nearest hydrant was about one-half mile away.

Mrs. Josephs, who was badly burned and cut when she attempted to break through a window in an effort to reach the child, said she had gone to a nearby store to obtain the baby's milk.

The father was cutting timber in a woods several miles away.

Neighbors said they heard the child crying but they were prevented from entering the house because of flames and heat.

The Josephs have another daughter two and one-half years old.

Build Bomb Shelters In Kentucky Mountains

LOVELY, Ky., Sept. 4 (AP) — A World War veteran and a merchant are taking no chances that this isolated section of mountainous eastern Kentucky might be bombed if the United States enters the war. They constructed what they believe are bomb-proof shelters.

John Hale, the veteran, built his shelter under a huge rock cliff on a steep hillside, and constructed a door of logs two-feet thick.

Using steel-inforced concrete, Palmer Trimble had his shelter built in a deep cellar beneath his store.

Three Convicts Free Hostages And Surrender

Two Girls and a Youth Unharmed in Louisiana Break

COLUMBIA, La., Sept. 4 (AP)—Demands for a "truce" failing, three desperate Arkansas convicts threw down their guns in a cornfield today and surrendered peacefully after releasing unharmed two girls and a boy held captive nearly forty-eight hours.

Surrounded by 1,000 grim possemen, the desperadoes gave up a few hours after freeing one of the girls and sending her to officers with a demand for safe passage through posse lines on the threat of death to the other two high school students.

Another Fugitive Killed

The surrender near here was followed quickly by the killing of another fugitive and additional recaptures among the band of thirty-six criminals which shot its way to freedom on Labor Day in a sensational break from the Cummins prison farm. In all, two convicts are dead, seventeen have been retaken and seventeen remain at large.

In their mad break from the Arkansas prison form, the convicts killed a trusty guard. One of the ringleaders was Frank Conley, 34, who was killed by a posse fusilade when searchers came upon him as they scoured this sector for the group that kidnaped the three young people. Carlos [illegible] from the spot where the felons killed Merchant-Postman Frank Gartman early yesterday.

Three Give Up Guns

Caught in a closing flank of state police and trusty convicts in civilian clothes from the Louisiana Angola penitentiary, three of Conley's companions tossed away their guns.

Voncelle Williams, 16-year-old Rayville, La., girl, conveyed to officers the convicts' demands for escape. She walked out of dense swamplands to tell police of a threat to kil Gladys Diamond, 15, and Gerry Harrigill, 17, if the posse denied passage. The three Rayville youngsters were kidnapped Monday when the criminals commondeered their car.

State Bank Robbery Insurance Low

BALTIMORE, Sept. 4 (AP)—Maryland's bank robbery and resident burglary insurance rates are among the lowest in the nation, John B. Gontrum, State Insurance Commissioner, asserted today.

New York state has the lowest bank robbery insurance rate in the country for policies $5,000 and under, but its resident burglary rates are higher than Maryland's Gontrum said.

Commenting on an announcement by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters that bank robbery rates have been reduced in thirty-six states and Alaska, Gontrum said Maryland was not included in the group because it already has rock-bottom rates.

He added that Maryland rates were almost irreduceable because it would be hard for insurance companies to collect lower rates and still make a profit.

New York state charges $1.20 per $1,000 for bank robbery insurance policies up to $5,000 and $2 per $1,000 for policies over $5,000. The Maryland rates is $2 per $1,000 for policies below and above $5,000, Gontrum said.

Hedy Lamarr Sues Markey for Divorce

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 4 (AP)—Hedy Lamarr, black-haired film beauty, filed suit for divorce today from Gene Markey, young film producer.

She charged "cruel and inhuman treatment" which she declared caused her "grievous mental and physical suffering." The brief complaint supplied no details.

The couple married in Ensenada, Mexico, March 4, 1939, after a whirlwind romance. They separated last July 6, the complaint said.

Miss Lamarr previously was married to Fritz Mendl, multi-millionaire Austrian munitions manufacturer, from whom she was divorced after appearing in the European film "Ecstacy." She met Markey several months after coming to Hollywood and both declared later it was "love at first sight."

Markey was divorced from Joan Bennett, the actress, in June, 1937.

Miss Lamarr asked the court to approve a property agreement dated August 12. Details were not made public.

Flynn Finds Wealth Is Behind Willkie

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4. (AP)— Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said after a White House conference today that Wendell L. Willkie would get more financial support than President Roosevelt in the presidential campaign because "all the wealth of the country is behind Willkie—that is, the misguided wealth."

Flynn talked with newsmen after giving Mr. Roosevelt his first report on election prospects since he took over the Democratic chairmanship from James A. Farley.

Worry Found To Cause Rush of Acid to Stomach

Discovery Is Announced to American Psychological Association

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Sept. 4 (AP)—Discovery of a rush of acid into the stomach during intense worry was reported today to the American Psychological Association.

Two New York physicians said they found this in eleven persons with stomach ulcers, and in eight others with burning sensations in the stomach. The worry periods apparently were the direct cause of the ulcers and indigestion.

The report was made by Drs. Bela Mittelmann, of New York Post Graduate Hospital, and Harold G. Wolff, of Cornell University Medical School.

They found hydrochloric, the normal digestive juice. The amount sometimes more than doubled during the worrying.

The Physicians were able to measure the acid change by fine rubber tubes running down, via the nose, into the stomach while the patients talked about their troubles.

One man was worrying because a fellow-worker had died unexpectedly and he had an obsession of fear of the same fate. His stomach trouble had started after this worry began and after he had tried to conceal it from evidence, even his wife.

Another stomach victim showed the rushes of acid when he told how his wife dominated him.

Another man had been a successful broker and church worker, but who had an affair with a servant girl, appeared with duodenal ulcer. His home life was unhappy. His character was diagnosed as one who craves approval. He, too, had the high acid during worry and rhythmic movements of his digestive system speeded up above normal during these attacks. Outbursts of anger, resentment and indignation caused the high acidity.

One sufferer even got the extra acid when sound asleep but dreaming of his troubles.

Fuehrer

rection, "and it won't be national socialist Germany."

England, he predicted, will collapse."

Again thunderous cheers arose.

When he jested about "Bluff Cooper, Senile Old Chamberlain, and Loquacious Babbler Churchill," the audience laughed uproariously.

He recalled, he said, that he had always desired to come to an amicable arrangement with Britain. But now, he said, biting the words sharply, "I prefer to fight until a clear decision is reached."

The Fuhrer wore a field-gray Nazi party uniform and stood on a high rostrum against a background of a large golden eagle with a swastika in its claws. It was his first public speech since July 19—nearly seven weeks ago.

Correspondents Invited

The first that foreign correspondents heard of the speech was when they were invited to enter a bus in front of the propaganda ministry to take them "somewhere where the Fuhrer will speak."

Hitler gave a discursive analysis of how from his viewpoint British hopes were dashed to the ground from the beginning of the war. Then he recalled that Britain had said the Norwegian campaign of the Nazis was "a grave German mistake," and ended up with the campaign in the west, culminating in France's collapse.

"Their Haille Selassies, King Haakons, and Queen Wilhelminas couldn't help them," he said mockingly. "Against the British generals revolution, hunger, winter and bluff, we pose our General Deed and General Volksgemainschaft (community spirit) of our people."

Hitler asserted that the British performance on the continent was "one series of defeats."

Praises German People

"It ended with 'the tremendous success' at Dunkerque," he said. "Well, I saw it—it looked pretty disorderly to me.—"

He praised the German people for their loyalty.

The fight over central Germany was described by informed sources as the first big engagement of the war over Germany.

Four or five British bombers were reported shot down by anti-aircraft fire and German fighters at Berlin, and authorized sources said "lively activity of German and English planes was observable in the Magdeburg region" about seventy miles west of Berlin.

A British raider was reported brought down by the cable of a barrage balloon. The use of such balloons—the report was not verified—and the use of German fighting planes would be departures in German air defense.

The high command reported today that a single submarine had sunk six armed British merchantmen totalling 51,507 tons and including the 15,007-ton Dunvegan Castle, previously reported by both the Germans and the British.

ish naval vessels north of Skagen, at the northern tip of Denmark.

The fishermen were quoted as saying that the transport was carrying German troops to Norway and that only about 200 of those aboard were saved.

SAVED IN SHIP TORPEDOING

One of 320 refugee children saved when an evacuation ship was torpedoed by the Germans, according to the British censor, this blanket-wrapped youngster is being taken ashore at a North England port. Of 875 persons aboard the Canada-bound liner, only the purser, who fell overboard during launching of lifeboats, was lost.

Summary of War News

his intense opposition to the surrender of northern Bucovina to Russia in June, was reported to have turned down the premiership because King Carol refused to meet "drastic conditions" such as dismissal of a court clique. Other Balkan reports said Antonescu had demanded Carol's abdication in favor of Prince Mihai.

Mexico has been torn by political dissensions since the bloody July presidential elections in which both candidates, administration-backed Gen. Manuel Avila Comacho and anti-administration General Juan Andreu Almazan, claimed victory.

The situation became more tense yesterday when Almazan's followers issued a manifesto carrying an implicit call to arms.

Avila Comacho's office promptly said the Almanistas have called the people to rebellion but that they may call "until doomsday without receiving any answer."

With Germany preparing to line the Rumanian-Soviet Russian border with Panzer troops to enforce her protection of the shrunken kingdom, Russia called youths of 18, 19 and 20 to the colors beginning the middle of September. It was said the call was made to guard the nation at a time of "imperialist war" and "capitalist encirclement." Older men also were called up.

Reports from Hanoi, French Indo-China capital, said the Japansee had insisted on imediate use of the port of Haiphong as a military base and on the right to move troops over the French-owned Yunnan railroad for an attack on South China.

In Washington Secretary of State Hull, taking notice of that far-eastern situation, publicly reminded Japan of the American government's recent statement that the principle of the status quo in the Pacific should be expected. If events proved the Japanese ultimatum reports to be well-founded, he said "the effect upon public opinion in the United States would be unfortunate."

confusion: troops, Iron Guardists, peasants under the leadership of Juliu Maniu, old Liberals—they all met in the early morning hours tensely awaiting the next move.

Carol, upon whose person and throne one unsuccessful attempt already had been made, had summoned Antonescu to form a new government—expected to be a military dictatorship—after accepting the resignation of the strongly pro-Nazi premier Ion Gigurtu.

Antonescu's first significant act was to urgently summon all Rumanian generals here for a mysterious conference. They arrived by plane.

Bucharest was filled with troops today. Explosions in the outskirts were attributed to an attempt to blow up oil storage tanks. Troops were sent into the oil fields.

Germans in Rail Station

Dispatches from Szolnok, Hungary, said—despite formal denials by the Budapest foreign office—that a small band of German soldiers had taken up quarters in the Szolnok railway station.

It appeared these formed the first unit of a large force which is to be sent to Rumania to guard the Soviet frontier.

General Antonescu was released only a few hours before his appointment, from a monastery, whence he had been bundled off because of his angry opposition to Rumania's surrender of northern Bucovina to Russia some two months ago.

He returned to power amid a crisis caused by a new surrender—the government's obedient acceptance of the orders of Germany and Italy that it now must give up northern Transylvania to Hungary.

It appeared that he had been nominated to the very top post in the country for these reasons:

1. His established reputation as an iron disciplinarian.

2. His high place in the army, whose favor is vital to the crown.

3. His record as a nationalist who once before had stood out against the shrinking of Rumania's frontiers.

The king, it appeared, put aside personal enmity for Antonescu because of fears:

Hungary May Act

That continued outbreaks might lead Hungary to attempt to take not merely the northern half of Transylvania, but all of it.

That Russia might move yet again. During the day Rumania heard with concern that Moscow had called up new troops, and it was understood here that they were coming to Rumania's frontier.

That Germany, whose troops already are preparing to occupy Rumania's frontier with Russia, might take over the whole country unless growing agitation against the Axis Transylvania dictate was halted.

Four army generals were reported under arrest as plotters against the government; there were rumors of revolts of three army corps; nation-wide railway strikes threatened to spread to a complete breakdown of communications.

Tonight, Rumania's police stations were being filled with arrested Iron Guardists, whose members accepted responsibility for the attempted coup of last night.

Martin Company

dition to the Middle River plant group.

Officials said bomber production would be doubled and employment provided for 37,000 men within twelve months.

First To Break Ground

By this early start, declared Martin observing that his plant is the first aircraft company to break ground for new facilities under the defense program, "we are demonstrating the spirit which will be required of all manufacturers in meeting the heavy demands to be made on us."

He indicated that other additions would be followed as soon as possible and said his company had already received temporary government approval of 703,712 square feet of floor space to be built at Middle River.

The company exepects to begin plane construction in the new addition about Jan. 1, Martin said. In addition to the actual cost of the new building, the expansion will entail the installation of almost $1,000,000 in new machinery and equipment.

Three Bombers Daily

Martin said three large bombers were being turned out daily, but declined to say haw many more would be produced under the speed-up program other than that it would meet government requirements.

He said four new projects were contemplated and that the company might "go out of the state" to conform with the trend toward decentralization of vital industries that would become military objectives in time of war.

"We have been called upon to build the best military planes in the world at a rate greater than any other nation on the globe," he said. "That is a real job, but it can and will be done, if we have the loyal support of all patriotic Americans and the understanding of their representatives. These we confidently expect."

Heavy Rains Cause Much Damage to Crops

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 4 (AP)—The weekly crop and weather report of the U. S. weather bureau said today that recent heavy rains caused much damage to some Maryland vegetable and fruit crops.

"The wet weather ruined fifty to sixty per cent of Belle of Georgia peaches at Joppa," the report stated, "caused peaches to rot at Flintstone and damaged peaches at Millsboro."

Besides peaches, tomatoes, cantaloupes and watermelons were damaged.

Other crops, fruits, grasses and pasture were "improved to good," the survey declared.

"The wet weather interfered with plowing, harvesting, haying and other outdoor operations.

"Tomatoes cracked and split at Joppa and Hurlock and are rotting at Snow Hill. Flavor of cantaloupes and watermelons was ruined by the excess rain at Hurlock.

"Some oats in shock and some hay were damaged by the rain in Garrett county. Yield of oats was good at Flintstone.

Digging of early potatoes continued in northern counties, but some are rotting in the ground at Laurel, the report said.

"Sweet potato tubers are developing and sizing in western Maryland and are maturing in the central and eastern divisions."

The report, for the week ending Sept. 3, observed that the growing season is about ten days behind normal.

Defense Commission Urges That "No Strings" Be Attached

By JOHN W. HENDERSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4. (AP)—Defense commission officials urged today that "no strings" be attached pending legislation liberalizing amortization provisions of existing tax laws lest the measure fail in its objective of attractive private capital into defense industries.

The officials, including William S. Knudsen, former General Motors president, Leon Henderson and James Biggers, appeared before the Senate Finance Committee to testify that the commission was unanimously opposing certain restrictions written into the excess profits tax bill by the House.

They contended that fears expressed by Senator Clark (D-Mo.) that removal of the restrictions might enable contractors to "gouge" the government by obtaining the full cost of new defense plants as part of the price received on a few armament orders, were groundless. This was true, they said, because of "sharper negotiation" on the part of the government based on experience during World war.

In Conflict With Treasury

Biggers, a business man who is deputy defense commissioner, told the committee that the commission found itself in conflict with the treasury on the issue, the latter believing that the restrictions should be written into the law while the commission believed that the government could be protected by contract procedure.

As the excess profits bill passed the House it provided that, for certain purposes, industry might charge off the entire cost of a defense facility in five years against earnings, thereby reducing the tax pair for that period. The bill also provided, however, that if a taxpayer elected to speed up amortization in this manner he would be required to agree not to destroy or substantially alter the facility involved without consent in writing from the secretary of war or secretary of the navy.

If consent were refused, under the House provision the government would be able to acquire the property on a so-called "adjusted" basis, which would be the original cost less tax deductions.

Henderson's Opinion

"If these sections are left in," said Henderson, who is a member of the Securities Commission as well as the Defense Commission, "we might just as well drop the whole rapid amortization out of the picture."

Biggers testified that the commission was contemplating use of plants for general plans for building up defense industries, the first of which was the amortization plan designed to induce private capital to undertake expansion for defense orders. The proposed restrictions, he said, might make it necessary to rely entirely on the alternative plans.

One of these, he said, would provide for government reimbursement of the cost of a defense facility in certain types of industry, in which event the government might acquire title to the plant at the end of the rearmament program.

Hand from Grave Should Not Stop New Marriages

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage—Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Five thousand dollars cash immediately and $65,000 in a trust fund await a California woman, under the terms of a will recently filed, but the lady must not be married and must not marry henceforth if she accepts the trust fund.

The will states that in the event of the marriage of the lady "to any other person than myself, either prior or subsequent to my death", the bequest shall go to someone else.

This type of will is not new, but the taboo against marriage is not invoked usually unless in the case of a husband or wife. Some excuse may be found for a man who knows he is married to scatterbrain, and that she will probably accept the first proposal of marriage offered her in her widowhood, and that his children will have a hard time to get an education or the start in life that he worked early and late to give them.

Skirt Chaser, Also

The same line of argument may be true of a woman with a philandering husband, a skirt-chaser who just can't help himself, and who will bring in, as a stepmother to lord it over her children, the first possessive female he meets. She argues: Why should I leave every cent my fathr left me for some other woman to enjoy, while my own sons and daughters go without?

But for the dead hand to reach up from the grave and prevent the marriage of someone to whom one is not bound by matrimonial ties offers a new aspect as a study in jealousy.

The best definition of jealousy offered by specialists who make a study of "Why We Behave Like Human Beings" is that it's a form of fear. Victims of the green-eyed monster fear he or she will not measure up to the hated rival.

Might Be Generous

But what has a dead man to fear? In death he might be generous. All of us hope that in death we may not be concerned with those embittering emotions which confront us in our daily life. Even the agnostic hopes for forgetfulness in which the cares of a distraught world shall not intrude in the long sleep.

Why this vigilant guarding after death, this watchfulness, this demanding exclusive worship and love? Why not trust the fate and be generous?

As a companion-piece, it's pleasant to think of another type of will which old Washington, D. C., cherishes. It was made by a Russian minister plenipotentiary (we didn't rate ambassadors then). He married a girl much younger than himself. In his will he made substantial provision for her second husband "if my beloved wife should marry," and marry the lady did. But old Washington still speaks affectionately of the Russian aristocrat who knew how to be generaus after death.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

O'Conor Favors Changes In Income Tax Law

BALTIMORE, Sept. 4 (AP)—Governor O'Conor said that he had sent a letter to the state commission on tax revision recommending that the Maryland income tax law be amended to allow for some reductions and care for other "iniquities."

The commission will report on its findings to the legislature in January.

The governor declared that, in his opinion, the income levy might be reduced without impairment to the state's fiscal position.

He suggested that the commission study a proposal to reduce the levy on persons in the lower income bracket to obtain money from investments classified as "unearned income" by law and thus subject to a higher rate than earned income.

Another proposal was for the payment of income taxes in quarterly instalments, rather than in lump sums.

The employment office rounded up all the Johnsons it could.

Vaccination for Smallpox Should Be Made Early in Child's Life

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Thackeray, in "Henry Esmond," that novel the scene of which is laid in eighteenth century England, describes in one chapter the chill fear that creeps over a household when it is rumored that there is smallpox in a nearby village. The fear is all the more panicky in that everyone feels so hepless. There is nothing to do to prevent the incursion of the plague; wandering tradesmen coming to the door of the house may spread it; a servant who goes into town may come back and give the disease to the entire household. The only protection was in having had a previous attack.

If we try to protect ourselves in that frame of mind, we will be in a position to thank heaven that we have today a safe and sure way of preventing smallpox. Instead of complaining about the trouble of vaccination, or putting off the day when it should be done, one day of experience like that in the eighteenth century would make us want to rush pell mell and have all the children vaccinated at once.

No Such Fear Today

Because if you hear today that smallpox has broken out in the next village, you just shrug your shoulders and see to it that everyone in your household is vaccinated right away.

On one occasion when I was ward surgeon of a hospital in the army, a drafted man was brought in who broke out with virulent smallpox within an hour or two. He reported this to the colonel who was in command of the hospital and he said, "Well, that's one thing we don't have to worry about in the army. We have a hundred percent vaccinated army, and if you wanted to, you could leave the man in the ward without doing any harm."

So among my recommendations about preparing the young child for school, I should like to emphasize very strongly that you be sure to look up the record and make certain your child has been vaccinated against smallpox.

In a group of college students at Manhattan, Kansas, it was found that twenty per cent had never been vaccinated.

The Younger the Better

The age at which smallpox vaccination should be done is very young. One series of cases has been reported when it was done on the first day of life. Six months is conservatively considered the proper time. The young patients stand it better than when they are older. The multiple puncture method now used is hardly troublesome enough to require the use of a dressing.

We hear objections about the trouble of having vaccination done three times, but it has been found that simultaneous immunization against smallpox, typhoid and diphtheria can be done at the same time without any more reaction than one gets from vaccine given for only one disease.

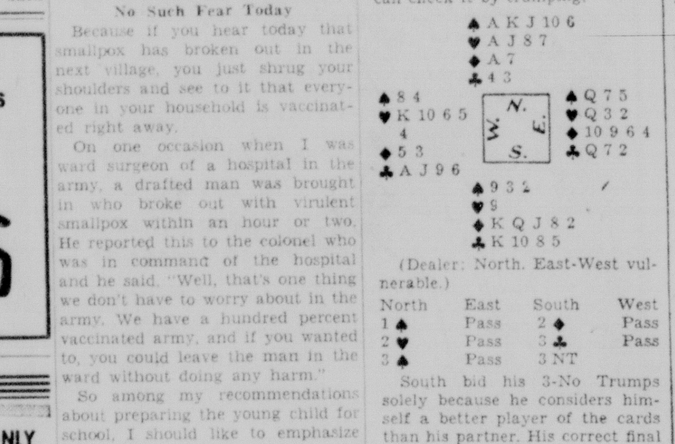
"The Authority on Authorities"

SUITS USUALLY SAFER

EXCEPT when one or both of the partnership hands can show only one four-card suit, all side suits consisting of three cards each, it is nearly always easier to take ten tricks at any fitting suit than nine tricks at No Trump, a fitting suit being one in which the side holds eight cards or one partner has at least six. There are two reasons for this. First, extra tricks may be made by ruffing, tricks which are not possible when there is no trump. Second, no hostile suits can be run, because you can check it by trumping.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♦	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT

South bid his 3-No Trumps solely because he considers himself a better player of the cards than his partner. His correct final bid, when holding three of his partner's rebid five-card suit, was 4-Spades, and he knew it as well as anyone. As it turned out, his partner could have made the spade game without difficulty, by merely running the spades and discarding several losers on the solid diamonds. Only one trick would have been lost in spades and two in clubs.

It was fun to watch South struggle with his No Trump game. The heart 5 was led to the 8 and Q, then the club Q was returned. South let it win, covered the 7 with the 8 and let West win with the 9. The latter would not conveniently return the suit, but led to the spade A, declarer's first trick. Followed then five diamonds in an effort to squeeze West between hearts and clubs, but the latter kept his best two of each suit.

When South then led to the spade K, West was squeezed, but he could now discard a club with impunity, knowing South could not lead to his own hand. So he could only take dummy's heart A, then lead to the heart K. That and the club A set him one.

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

Following normal bidding of this deal, if West leads the spade K to the first trick, how can he know that he should then shift to a club in order to beat South's 6-Hearts?

Home Should Not Be Court House For Children

Writer Says Parents Are Wrong in Assuming Prosecutor's Role

BY GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

May I be allowed to indulge in a few don'ts? You say Yes? Here they do.

Don't be a judge at home, extorting evidence from the child concerning his conduct in your absence. Don't hold "Court" with your children. If, when you come home you observe some injured property, replace it or repair the damage if you can, but don't set out to discover the offender. If it is your neighbor's property that is damaged and your neighbor says he thinks your child was the offender, but did not see him do it, proceed in like manner. Replace the property and render satisfactory compensation for the sake of peace.

If a child volunteers confession, try to make him see how serious the matter is, but do not punish him. If the destruction was deliberate it probably was not the first offense; nor is it likely to be the last. Thereafter keep your eyes and ears open. When you yourself observe an offense, deal with it adequately; make it painful. Teach the child while you are with him such care of property as will function when you are away from him. Don't be absent soon again! or if you must be, have a competent adult at home.

Leaving Orders

Don't give commands to your children to be carried out in your absence. Don't tell them what to do or not to do away from home; what to eat or not to eat at school. Commands, to be effective, must carry very certain penalties when they are not obseved. But how are you to know always when commands to be carried out away from home have been obeyed? You can, of course, engage detectives to report to you. But as soon as you do so you lose the confidence of your child. This loss can never be repaired. You can question the child; but if you do you are almost sure to make him lie. Suppose you forbid him to enter the "sweet shop," or you command him to have milk and spinach at the school lunch. You then have no way of really knowing whether he obeys. You ask him if he has obeyed. If he answers "no" you punish him or register, at least, your disapproval. Next time you question him he is more sensible and practical. He recalls what it was you had commanded him to do or not to do and he replies accordingly, regardless of the facts. The child who, under such conditions does not learn to lie is doubtless feeble-minded. When the adolescent child returns from her affairs," don't hold an inquisition. You may properly make a few requests and lead the child to want to do its right thing in your absence.

As always, I shall be glad to hear from my readers. If you desire a personal reply, please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, as you write me at 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York City. In like manner you may have a selected list of books on "adolescence," or of pamphlets on care and training of the baby.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My children, 5 and 7, fight contstantly in the back seat of the car on the way to church and Sunday school.

A. Have one of them sit in the front seat hereafter. If they still annoy you as you drive, pull out to the side, and give each one a good strapping. Do a good job of it. This is much more humane than to run the hazards of an accident. The lives of all of you are at stake.

Q. Suppose a child of three, in rage, threw an object. Would you order him to pick it up?

A. Not if I were acting intelligently. If I did command him, he might not obey though I spanked him long and brutally. I might spank him immediately after he threw the block saying, "You mustn't do that." Then I would either pick up the block myself or leave it lie there. My concern should not be in having the block picked up but in changing the child so he would not be inclined to throw an object in a future fit of anger. Let us keep our attention on the future as we measure values.

Knudsen Resigns

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (AP) — William S. Knudsen resigned here as president of General Motors corporation because of his governmental duties as a member of the national defense advisory commission. He had been on leave of absence since June 1.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of the board of directors, said that Knudsen also resigned as a member of the board of directors and of the corporation's policy and administrative committees, severing all official relation with the corporation.

"The board felt," Sloan said, "that in view of the approaching time when the corporation may be in a position to enter into contracts with the government to supply products required under the defense program, it must of necessity accept Mr. Knudsen's dual position. This was done with the greatest regret."

No action was taken on naming Knudsen's successor.
